Colors of the Opal.
In judging an opal color is of the greatest importance. Red fire or red in combination with yellow, blue and green is the best. Blue by itself is quite valuable, and the green opal is not of great value unless the color is very vivid and the pattern very good. The color must be true—that is to say, it must not run in streaks or patches, alternating with a colorless or inferior quality. Pattern is an important factor, the several varieties being known as "pin fire" when the grain is very small, "harlequin" when the color is in small squares, the more regular the better, and the "flash fire," or "flash opal," when the color shows as a single flash or in very large patterns. Harlequin is the most common and is also popularly considered the most beautiful. When the squares of color are regular and show as distinct minute checks of red, yellow, blue and green it is considered magnificent. Some stones show better on edge than on top.—Exchange.

Barrels.
A barrel is not always a barrel, for, according to a Massachusetts judge, the matter of state lines has considerable to do with it. Some time since a Boston man purchased 200 barrels of sweet potatoes in the state of Maryland. When the sweet potatoes arrived in Boston the purchaser sold one barrel just as it had come from Maryland, but it appears that the barrel weighed only 120 pounds instead of 150 pounds, the legal weight in Massachusetts. In that state when a person buys a barrel of potatoes the weight must be not less than 150 pounds. The Massachusetts courts ruled that the purchaser of the Maryland sweet potatoes violated the law when he sold the barrel that was underweight, although the barrel was a legal one in Maryland. Therefore a barrel is not a barrel in Massachusetts when it weighs less than 150 pounds.—Utica Press.

Penetration of Light.
Experiments show that light can be seen through a clean cut opening of not more than one forty-thousandth of an inch.
This fact was determined by taking two thoroughly clean straight edges and placing a piece of paper between them at one end, the opposite end being allowed to come together. The straight edges being placed in a dark room, a wedge of light was perceived from the ends between which the paper was placed and the opposite, which were brought together. The thickness of the paper being known, the distance apart of the two edges of the small end of the wedge of light was easily calculated.

Irving's Intensity.
The piercing eyes and intense expression of Henry Irving once had the effect of making a fellow actor altogether forget that he was on the stage at all. It occurred in Manchester during a performance of "Macbeth," and in the scene where Macbeth says to one of the murderers, "There's blood upon thy face!" Irving put so much earnestness into his words that the murderer forgot his proper answer ("The Banquo's, then") and replied in a startled voice: "Is there? Great Scott!" He fancied, as he afterward said, that he'd broken a blood vessel.

GREENWOOD

The Englishman Spoke.
In a second class railway carriage, going from Lausanne to Paris, I once passed a night of conflict. On my side were a Swiss who spoke English and an Englishman who didn't speak. Our opponents were two members of a Latin race. They wanted the windows shut. We wanted at least one window open. Our common cause drew the three of us together. At first the Englishman's expression had seemed to wonder whether the Swiss and the American were quite worthy to prefer fresh air. As the night wore on this expression waned, and I thought I detected a trace of sympathy in the glances he sparingly aimed at us.
In answer to my question the Swiss explained his mastery of the English language by saying he had learned without a teacher, just by sitting near a window in a tub of cold water. At this the Englishman almost spoke. Morning came. He filled his pipe and began to hunt through his pockets for matches. The Swiss offered him a box. "Thank you," he said gravely; "I prefer my own," and went on hunting.—New Republic.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE DURING FAIR WEEK

In order to co-operate to the fullest extent with The Dalles Business Men's association, the Wasco County Annual Institute will be held during the week of the county fair, beginning Tuesday morning, September 28, and lasting until Thursday noon, September 30. This will enable the teachers to have one and one half days in which to visit the fair.
Monday, September 27, will be used by the teachers in arranging the exhibits from the different districts in the children's department of the Wasco county fair.

It is contrary to law for any school to be in session during the time of the annual institute. The school children therefore, will be enabled to visit the fair. This will result in many people coming from the country who would not come if they had to take the children out of school to do so.

Teachers are required by law to attend the Annual Institute and the penalty for failure to do so, is the revocation of the teacher's certificate. This extreme penalty has never been visited upon a Wasco county teacher.

Miss Mary Sullivan will act as secretary of the institute. She will issue certificates of institute attendance to the teachers. This certificate must be filed by the teachers with the clerk of his or her respective district and is the clerk's authority for paying the teacher's salary during the time of the institute.

Competent instructors have been secured for the institute and a successful session is expected.

Cold Doesn't Always Contract.

There are many ways of demonstrating the fallacy of the assertion that "heat expands, cold contracts." When water touches ice as well as freezes to ice it increases in bulk. Sometimes it is said, however, that the volume of the sum of the ice crystals alone is no greater than that of the original liquid, but that the crystals of ice do not fit in well together and leave spaces between them which account for the apparent increase in volume.

Molten metals, as a rule, contract upon solidification, which is nothing but freezing. Some alloys, on the other hand, expand when solidified. Type metal, which is composed chiefly of lead and antimony, is such an alloy. This property is of particular advantage in this case because it causes the metal in solidifying to fill up every tiny corner and half space in the matrix.—New York World.

Wild Zebras.

The zebra when wild is a ferocious animal, and an unwary hunter is likely to suffer from its teeth and hoofs. The author of "Kloof and Karroo" says that a Boer in Cape Colony had once forced a zebra to the brink of a precipice, when the desperate creature turned upon him, attacked him with its teeth and actually tore one of his feet from the leg. Another author writes of a soldier who mounted a half domesticated zebra. The creature, after making the most furious attempts to get rid of its rider, plunged over a steep bank into the river and threw the soldier as it emerged. While the man lay half stunned upon the ground the zebra quietly walked up to him and bit off one of his ears.

An Old Time Advertisement.

In old newspapers the advertisements make interesting reading. Here is one from the London Chronicle of 1785: "Hun Away.—Whereas Thomas Williams, Apprentice to John Clark of Queensborough, in the County of Kent, dregdgerman, has run away from his said master's service and not been heard of these three years, if the said Thomas Williams will return to his master's service within three months after the date of this advertisement he will be kindly received, and whoever harbours him after this notice will be prosecuted as the law directs."

Airing Mattresses.

If you have a flat roof take every mattress in the house up there once a week and leave them in the hot sun for several hours. They will then be fluffy and sweet smelling. It would be well for the pillows and bedding to receive the same treatment.
A mattress will be easier to handle if straps are attached to the sides, and for this purpose pieces of old suspenders are very satisfactory, or strips made from bed ticking. Sew the straps or handles on firmly, two on each side.
