Such sales shall be public and be held at the pound, and no bid shall in any case be received for a sum less than the fees and charges of impounding, advertising, keeping or selling the same, together with the amount sufficient to procure a license upon said animal, for which last amount the purchaser or owner shall receive a license upon such animal for the current license year. The poundmaster shall be entitled to charge for impounding such animal a fee of $1.00 for each male dog and $3.00 for each female dog, and for keeping such animal the sum of 25 cents per day. In case a sufficient sum is not bid for any animal to pay all fees, charges and license fee upon the same, the poundmaster may, at his own discretion, adjourn the sale from day to day, not more than three in all, or if no sufficient bid is made for any animal the poundmaster is empowered and authorized to kill the same.

COUNTY WINS THE ROAD TAX CASES

Hood River County officials have received an announcement from Circuit Judge Bradshaw, of The Dalles, to the effect that he had decided in favor of the county in the cases of the Wind River Lumber Co. and the O.-W. R. & N. Co., both of which had attempted to restrain the county by injunction from collecting an eight mill special road tax levied last fall by the voters of Cascade Locks. The tax, which will raise a sum of approximately $8,000, all of which will be spent on the Columbia river highway, was objected to by the plaintiff companies on the ground that the special election was illegal in that estimates on the proposed work for which the funds were voted should have been published under the budget law.

The cases will probably be appealed to the supreme court. Judge Derby demurred to the complaints of the corporations' attorneys, and his demurrer was sustained.

Wasco Pioneer Dead

George Anderson, well known pioneer business man of The Dalles, died early Tuesday. He was formerly in the furniture business at The Dalles and was a brother of the late Alexander Anderson, both prominent in business affairs and early life of that city.

The following obituary taken from The Dalles Optimist will be of interest to local people who were acquainted with the deceased when she was a resident of Mosier:

Susan Downs was born in Terre Haute, Indiana, May 2, 1832, her friends celebrating her 84th birthday this year by a shower of postcards. She was early left an orphan and at the age of 21 started for the unknown west with friends by the name of O'Neill with whom she felt at home, crossing the plains to Oregon in 1853, having walked across the "great American desert" following an ox team the entire way. The train met with Indians, who robbed them of some of their stock, a big loss on such a journey. They arrived in The Dalles early in the fall and when going down the river the young girl met John McNulty while they were making the portage at Cascade Locks. Mr. McNulty was a steamboat man on the pioneer boats of the lower river to whom she was married February 21, 1854. He had come to the Oregon country by way of Cape Horn only a short time before. They were married in Portland by Rev. C. L. Kingsley of the Methodist church and they made their home at Shoalwater Bay and Portland for several years, the three older children being born there. In 1859 they came to The Dalles and the present home, 216 W. Second street was built in 1861 and the five younger children were born there. Four children of Mr. and Mrs. McNulty are still living, Mrs. Mary Halfpaw of Portland, Louise, Henry and Margaret of this city. Five grandchildren also survive.

Captain McNulty died February 8, 1906. He was captain of the old O. S. & N. boats, "Idaho" and "Ononts," the pioneer passenger boats of the upper river as the run was called and continued to occupy this position until a short time before his death. He was one of the volunteers who went to the rescue of the people at the Cascades after the Indian massacre of March 28, 1856, coming up from below on the steamer "Belle." He marked the trees at the Cascades where the nine Indians were hung, cutting the dates of the hanging. This was on the north bank at the upper steamboat landing of the old portage road a short distance below Stevenson.

Mrs. McNulty became a member of The Dalles Congregational church during the pastorate of Rev. D. V. Poling now of Portland and he was called upon to officiate at the last rites. For three years she had been in failing health caused by the ailments incident to old age and passed from this life early Saturday morning, May 6, 1916.
