SENATOR WILBUR INTRODUCES BILLS

Senator Geo. R. Wilbur, who has introduced a number of bills since the legislature convened, has created great interest with that containing provisions that will exclude any alien, not eligible to naturalization, from holding land in Oregon. Senator Wilbur's bill is similar to that adopted by California and which created international discussion. The bill will prevent further holdings of land by Japanese, who are rapidly acquiring large acreages of orchard land in Hood River county.

Senator Wilbur has also introduced bills pertaining to the manner of filing for record certain alien mortgage papers and another changing the age and time of enlistment in the naval militia.

He stated that the Regulator boat service will not be resumed until the first of March as the steamers Dalles City and State of Washington are undergoing repairs. Mr. Kingsbury declared that the company realizes the trouble during the past year when the dolphins were unable to withstand the heavy current of the high water and that this year cribbing may be put in to hold the dolphins in place so that the steamers may land in safety at all times of the year, and especially during the season of high water.

At the meeting Monday night of the members of the M. E. E. club it was decided to secure an Edison phonograph in preference to a player piano to furnish music for dancing in the club room. The committee appointed by vote of the members included the members of the executive and entertainment committees and arrangements have been made to have an Edison phonograph here for Monday night. Prizes will be offered for the high scores in bridge and Five Hundred games and refreshments of salad, sandwiches and coffee will be served at the next meeting. At this time membership cards will be presented. A campaign is now on to increase the membership and many plans for the future entertainment of the club members are already under way.

The committee of members of the Immanuel church who have been negotiating for a motion picture machine to be installed in the church report that sufficient funds have been subscribed to purchase a machine formerly used by one of the theaters in Hood River. The management of this theater guarantees this machine to be in perfect working order and has promised to send up an operator as soon as the church building is in readiness to receive it. The local committee will then probably call a meeting of local citizens to witness the film reproductions and render their judgment regarding the merits of this machine, which if proven to be satisfactory, the committee will purchase. This week and next week wiring for additional lights will be installed in the church, a rear exit made, the curtain constructed and operating room built in the belfry.

During the past week the weather has been cold and clear. No snow has fallen and the temperature has dropped as low as 13 degrees above zero in the city. In the higher regions of the valley it is reported as having dropped considerably lower and at the place of Gerald Wynn the thermometer registered one morning four degrees above zero. D. M. Montgomery, who resides near the Poe ranch, and who has been hauling wood into the city from his ranch says that he believes the thermometer dropped to zero at his place which is several hundred feet higher. One day this week he was able to cross on the ice with a load of wood at the junction where the two creeks come together. Skating has been good on the Johnson lake near No. 8 schoolhouse and also on McClure's lake. nateham's lake has been frozen over but it is reported that someone has been throwing rocks across the ice, which becoming imbedded, have ruined the ice for skating.

SKIING IS DELIGHTFUL OREGON SPORT

Accompanied by a number of excellent pictures of Mount Hood scenes, the following appeared in the Portland Spectator of last Saturday:

In the summertime city people want to wander away from work and heat, to drive in automobiles, or ride in trains, or sit astride a pony or walk to the wilds, the seashore and the national parks. In the winter, they want diversions of another kind—outdoors, if possible. Of course, it's an endless bother to get all the sports in the right season but there's a strange joy in the getting.

American people not only enjoy watching experts play the many popular games—baseball, ice hockey, football, soccer—but they like to take part in the sports, as well. That is why this is becoming a race of strong-bodied men and women.

And as they have grown stronger, they show a preference for sport of a hardy nature. So long walks on snowshoes and exciting slides down mountainsides on skis become favorite winter diversions. As there is such splendid opportunity for this diversion in only a short distance from Portland each year more thousands are becoming expert on the skis, the broad snowshoes and the toboggan.

As one can always go with gun, dog and good company where adventure beckons in the summertime, so one can always find good skiing on the slopes of old Mount Hood in the wintertime. Either the O. W. R. & N. trains or automobiles take parties to the snowbanks that offer such fine opportunity for skiing. The trains connect at Hood River with the Mount Hood railroad, which runs up to Parkdale, 22 miles up the valley. From there one can travel on snowshoes or skis to Mount Hood Lodge, where Mine Host Rogers greets all comers and serves hot food and coffee.

The great mountain looms up majestically, and beckons to the venturesome snowshoer or skier to have a bright day, the play of the sun rays on the snow makes colors of all hues.

You have never been on skis? You are afraid of getting hurt while learning? Dispel the thought. There is little danger. And when you do fall the snow is not a hard landing place. Do not hesitate because you have not yet learned the art. There is much fun in learning how not to trip and how not to tumble. Only a few lessons will be necessary before you will talk at length about proper fastenings, balance, tricks of climbing, speed in coasting and conserving of energy.

To the ski-runner the Oregon forests are much to be desired. The skiing season on the Hood River side of Mount Hood as well as on the Government Camp Hotel side, where a number of Mazamas enjoy a snowshoe trip last week. There are snowshoes for rent, and a few lessons will be necessary before you will talk at length about proper fastenings, balance, tricks of climbing, speed in coasting and conserving of energy.

The trip to Mount Hood Lodge is inexpensive and full arrangements can be made by writing to the Lodge at Parkdale, Ore., or communicating with William McMurray in the Wells-Fargo building, Portland. The skiing season usually is in January and February.

SINNOTT EXPLAINS NEW HOMESTEAD LAW

The Ferris 640 acre homestead law, which was signed recently by President Wilson, has, apparently, numerous attractions for Oregon residents, and N. J. Sinnott has sent out a rough draft of the law being prepared by the government printing office, which will give the major information sought by his constituents. It will be some time before the full text of the law and the rules and regulations governing the entry on the lands affected will be issued by the government printing office, though the land offices have information and the law is in effect. Pending receipt of the full text of the measure Mr. Sinnott writes that the rough draft should be sufficient for prospective entrants to get a general understanding of the law, says the Oregonian.

The law permits the entry of 640 acres of semi-grazing land by any qualified entrant. The law does not apply to all public lands, but to such areas as are suitable only for stock-raising and grazing. There is a considerable acreage in Oregon and other northwestern states under the Ferris act an entrant must reside upon his homestead not less than three years after the date of entry. Cultivation is not required. Commutation of entry is allowed.

If a homestead entrant heretofore has exhausted his homestead right by securing title to 160 acres in the humid regions, the 640 acre homestead tract does not restore his right nor permit him to enter an additional homestead. The theory of the law is that only one homestead may be taken by an individual entrant. If the homestead was lost or title ever acquired or grazing lands previously taken in smaller portions which would now come under the new act, a second entry could be made, of course.

Provision for restoring homestead rights to those who previously bought Indian lands being made.

While awaiting the designation of tracts available under the Ferris 640-acre homestead law, a prospective entrant may file an affidavit showing the land he desires and make application for suspension of any entry until the character of the land is designated. If the land is then designated as being under the new law actual entry may be made, otherwise it will be nullified.

The maker of an affidavit as a prospective entrant must be personally acquainted with the land and have inspected it.

The general land office does not issue maps. All arrangements should be made with the local land offices of the various districts.

In Oregon land offices are located at the following cities: Burns, La Grande, Lakeview, Portland, Roseburg, The Dalles and Vale.

Bible Sunday in Heaven

(From the Portland Journal)

In the current issue of the Masses, direct action organ of unusual and unconventional literary and artistic merit, Col. C. E. Wood, of Portland, has an illuminating article—the dialogue between God and Billy Sunday, when the latter seeks a place near the heavenly throne.

Sunday crashes up the pearly gates with the arrogant assurance of the egoist. He is surprised that St. Peter doesn't welcome him with unctuous ceremony, but rather demands credentials.

Sunday finally works his way to an audience with God. He sees in the throne room many men he did not expect to see there, among them Bob Ingersoll. The evangelist reviews his spiritual gymnastics while on earth, and expects unshrinking rewards for them.

But his "stinking" language and conventional exhortations are not approved, it seems, by the Creator, and Sunday, instead of being given a place at the right hand, is consigned to the depths of the monkey-man hell, one flight below the reformatory, kept stoked with ordinary manufacturers.

Ladies, secure your calling cards at the Bulletin office. 30 cards for 75c; 100 cards for $1.

Eye Strain

Eye strain is the cause of many ailments such as headache, nervous breakdowns and even insanity and many other troubles too numerous to mention. Dr. Geo. A. Cutting, one of the leading optometrists of the state who has had over 30 years' experience in eyesight defects of every description such as can be corrected with glasses, has located in The Dalles, He has offices with D. Lindquist, the leading jeweler, at 307 East Second street. Office hours: 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Sundays and evenings by appointment. Consultation free. Prices reasonable. Dr. Cutting was formerly with the largest optical house in California and also in Portland for the past 15 years.

Just Little Stories

Says a dispatch from Eugene:

Eugene has a city ordinance which requires drivers of automobiles turning street corners to extend a hand, indicating the direction in which they intend to turn.

Last week a pedestrian of the old school, unfamiliar with modern traffic regulations, stood on a prominent corner. A car drove up, traveling at a slow rate of speed, and a woman extended her hand. The pedestrian, surprised, extended his hand and grasped the woman's hand, shaking it in the manner of formal recognition.

"Who was that nice young woman who spoke to me and shook my hand so sweetly?" he asked a friend with whom he had been talking.

Yakima May Leave Distributors

The Yakima Valley Fruitgrowers' association may not be affiliated with the North Pacific Fruit Distributors next season according to the sentiment expressed in district meetings last week.

The districts were asked to report to central on the sentiment for withdrawing on postal cards, but they have taken up the matter in the district meetings, and the report so far is strongly in favor of severing connections with the larger selling agency. The Yakima valley organization was a big factor in the North Pacific organization, furnished a large part of the tonnage and paid a corresponding share of the expense, but the growers there think it adds to the overhead expense and brings no corresponding return.

If the sentiment prevails as shown by returns from nearby districts, the matter will be formally disposed of at the annual meeting of trustees held January 29, when the Distributors will be dropped and the Yakima Valley Fruit Growers' association will again become an independent marketing organization.

The Yakima association is really the parent of the other, for J. H. Robbins, who organized and managed this organization, conceived the larger unit and organized that.

S. W. Foster, representing the General Chemical Co., accompanied by C. F. Gilbert, of the firm of Gilbert & DeWitt, of Hood River, were in the city Wednesday to confer with the Mosier Fruit Growers Association regarding this year's supply of spray materials. In the past the local association has purchased from the General Chemical Co., quantities of arsenate of lead, atomic sulphur and lime-sulphur.
