THE PROMINENT DEAD.

President Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance, dies in Washington. WASHINGTON, June 11.—Colonel L. L. Polk, president of the Farmers' Alliance, died at 11:15 this morning.
WASHINGTON, June 11.—The 11 o'clock train over the Richmond & Danville road tonight carried the remains of Colonel L. L. Polk to Raleigh, N. C. for interment. The remains are accompanied by a party of about 25 of Colonel Polk's friends.
[Colonel Polk was 55 years of age, a relative of President Polk, and a native of North Carolina. He served for a time in the Confederate army and then resigned to enter the state legislature. Later he was commissioner of agriculture, and still later began the publication of the Progressive Farmer. At the time of his death he was serving his third term as president of the Farmers' Alliance. His home was in Raleigh, N. C. Had he survived he would probably have been nominated for president or vice-president at the People's Party convention, soon to be held in Omaha.]
COLONEL POLK'S FUNERAL.
RALEIGH, N. C., June 12.—The train bearing the body of President Polk arrived here at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was met at the depot by hundreds of people. The body was escorted to the First Baptist church, of which Polk was a communicant. By four o'clock the church was packed. Among those present were Governor Holt and all the state officers, members of the supreme court and officers of the state Farmers' Alliance. The services were conducted by D. S. Carter, Skinnis and Hall. At the conclusion of the service the remains were taken to Oakwood cemetery. At the cemetery a short address was made by R. V. Carter, after which R. V. Dr. Skinnis pronounced the benediction. Mrs. Polk, her three daughters and seven-in-laws were the chief mourners. Associate Ramsey and the composers of Polk's paper, the Progressive Farmer, were present at the funeral, which was one of the largest ever known here.
Mrs. Rork Dead.
Mrs. Anna Rork, wife of M. V. Rork, the People's Party nominee for congress, died June 11 at Salem, after a brief illness. Mr. Rork was in Oregon at the time. Mrs. Rork's death was unexpected.

Keep in the Middle of the Road.
ASHLAND, Ore., July 14, 1892.
Editor Southern Oregon Mail:
The People's Party cast a better vote than some expected in this part of the county and if the vote were taken this week many more would have supported the ticket than did, for several have said they would have done so if they had thought there was any show of electing anyone on that ticket.
The general result in the state is encouraging and proves we have the balance of power at least. Now let us continue the fight from now on and keep in the middle of the road and no compromise of principle for temporary success and then we will be sure to win grand results in the near future. Our members are sufficient to command respect and we must continue to push the battle till the old parties unite or one of the other goes down into oblivion. Then it will be the people against the plutocrats and their tools and henchmen and the masses will gain the victory over the classes and society take another grand stride in the march of progress and social evolution. The people are thinking and talking and they will not except stones for bread or promises for deeds. Let us not accept any misleading scheme of the bankers, but continue the demand for land loans and sub-treasuries and insist that aliens and corporations shall not own land for mere speculative purposes, and a reduction of passenger and freight rates to a fair interest on the actual investment with the watered stock left off. Let the tariff go for the present as that is less than one-fifth of an issue compared with what I have mentioned.

E. E. DEMING.

Eagle Point News.

The smoke of battle has cleared away—the battle of the ballots. The smoke of the best Haystack and the "old time" no longer prevails the pure mountain air of Eagle Point. The election passed off very quietly. Political differences of opinion had been discussed and settled in the electioneering days beforehand. Everything seems satisfactory except the office of justice of the peace, which is a "little mixed." Your correspondent, who is not a politician, feels sure that the country is safe. For how could it be otherwise when three or four political parties are looking so anxiously after its welfare.
The carpenter's hammer and saw is heard early and late on all sides. Blacksmiths are kept busy repairing farm implements. Wagon repairs are also in demand. Dry weather and rough roads are not healthy for wagons. Merchants are doing a thriving business, which is always the case when a good crop is anticipated. Everything depends upon the farmer, so why should he not rule the universe? Echo answers why?
The weather has been cloudy and cool the last week and hay makers are wishing for sunshine. The alfalfa crop was saved in good condition and was very heavy. A large acreage was sown in this crop in this vicinity last spring, and the season has been favorable for its growth. A number of railroad men from Omaha, Neb., were here recently, and one of our citizens took them up into a high mountain and showed them all the cities of Jackson county, but is not known if he offered to give any of them in exchange for a railroad to Eagle Point.
