Jones. Gus is getting along as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Each day, just as the sizzling sun is kissing the hilltops far around, may be seen much of Medford's youth and beauty quietly and sweetly strolling among the friendly trees that shade the roadway leading from town toward Roxy Ann. There the young man and maiden fair, free from earthly cares, trust, can safely waste their tales of love until the shadows of night, sternly closing down, admonish them that it is high time to return to "home and mother." Who knows but that ere summer is gone the little sprigs of affection now budding there will grow into great trees of love, the existence of which will create a demand for marriage licenses and the minister.

Misfortune Multiplies. Mrs. F. W. Knowles, whose house was burned near Jacksonville last Thursday, went into violent hysterics at the time, and since then has developed pronounced insanity. Her family and two physicians have been in constant attendance upon her, but her mania continues to assume more violent form. She begs to be taken to Salt Lake, where she has three grown children residing, restoring the ailing father, her husband and children burned her home. The Knowles family were very hard-working, industrious people and they had a pleasant home, surrounded with choice fruits and flowers, and it is little wonder that the sudden calamity should have temporarily deprived the woman of her reason. Her son started with her to Salt Lake Sunday, while her husband remains here with the other children to rebuild their home.
