STACKED CARDS "H-B" ORCHARD

North Dakota Herald Has Great Sport With William Budge and His Rogue Valley Orchard.

The following from the Grand Forks, N. D., Herald, will probably clear up in the minds of the party mentioned the unusual appearance of Mr. Budge's orchard on the occasion of their visit:

Sunday will be remembered by several as a somewhat chilly day. William Budge has in the past seen several such days in Grand Forks and indeed has had several interesting seasons with North Dakota weather. Mr. Budge, however, has been away from the state for several months and his memories of "dear old Dakota" were of the "banana belt" order. That's how it happened that Budge appeared on the streets of Grand Forks Sunday wearing a light summer suit instead of the well known corduroy and buffalo coat. He had just landed from a Northern Pacific train from Medford, Ore., orchards, where he has been pruning apple trees for many weeks past, but he had not been in town many minutes before he remembered that he had spent several winters in North Dakota, and proceeded to take to the woods of his own domicile. Mr. Budge is telling his Grand Forks friends great things about the new Eldorado he has discovered, but there is one incident he has apparently forgotten to mention. Mr. Budge has since the acquisition of his Medford fruit land been busily engaged in setting out fruit trees and gradually but surely bringing his broad acres into a high state of cultivation and improvement. He has about a dozen, more or less, two or three year old trees which had been growing faster than the schedule and were in bearing in this season, two or three more superb specimens of the luscious fruit crowning each of these particular trees.

Mr. Budge took great pride in his pets and when a party of North Dakota friends en route home from the Seattle fair stopped off to visit him between trains, he secured carriages and took them out to his orchard, a mile or so out of town. Arriving on the scene, however, he found his pet trees—no the story goes—bearing instead of 20-ounce red apples, which he proposed to present to his friends—as he had confided to Medford people, William beheld those apple trees bearing small, wormy and half rotten pears. He gasped a few gasps and then exploded. What he said would not look well in Sunday school stories. The North Dakotans got the apples later, but this is the first they have heard of how it happened.

Some of the Medfordites had possibly heard something of Budge's stunts in propping up dead deer in the North Dakota woods for E. C. Cooper to kill, unwittingly, thought it a good opportunity to catch up with him. The pear story can probably be verified by "Doc" Gendy, a former Grand Forks resident.

People out there have a habit of naming their orchards, and when William was asked what he proposed to call his fine orchard, said he thought he would call it the "H. B." orchard. The aforesaid said initials not standing for "Here's Budge," but for "Hudson Bay." Mr. Budge having been for some time in his younger days in the service of that famous old company, an experience he had never forgotten. But some Medfordites didn't know all about that and from "H. B." they have taken to calling it the "Highball" orchard.

Mr. Budge has one of the finest properties in all the Medford country and has already demonstrated that he can grow fruit successfully. He has some fine buildings and other improvements and has a superb building site selected for the future domicile for his family. During the winter he will have the plans made and next season will see there one of the finest residences in Oregon.

PORTLAND GAS COMPANY
SOLD TO NEW YORKERS

PORTLAND, Dec. 17.—Late developments in the reported purchase of the Portland Gas company by the Electric Bond and Share company of New York remove all doubts as to the ultimate transfer of the control of the plant to the New York corporation.

ANOTHER DANGER THREATENS COOK

Commission in Denmark Will Complete Their Examination of Records Within Two Weeks.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 17.—Danger from another quarter threatens the reputation of Dr. Cook, according to a member of the commission.

The scientist calls attention to the fact that the frost and storms of the polar region renders impossible absolute accuracy in the securing of data. But he says that Cook's figures will arouse more suspicion in the minds of the investigators. The commission began today and expects to reach a decision within a fortnight. It is unknown outside of the circle of scientists whether the affidavits of Loose and Dunkle accusing Cook of buying their aid in preparing his arctic data will be considered.
