know who got the money coming from his lands. At this Sorenson testified, Mays told him it was necessary to pay Senator Mitchell and Binger Hermann for the work that was being done by them in Washington towards furthering the creation of the reserve.

Juror Asks Question. More significant, however, than the Hermann link, was the point made by William Myers, one of the jurors, when he opened a slight vista into the irregularities of the Geer state land board's administration of 1901 by the questions which he asked Sorenson during the testimony. Sorenson had been telling of taking blank applications for school lands to the state land office and there filling them out to suit himself from the books of the office, afterwards filing them with the office.

"Do you mean to tell me," asked Juror Myers, "that the clerks of the state land board saw you doing that kind of work?"

"Sure," said Sorenson. "I had been doing that for a long time, and we were all in the same room together, and they saw me, and then filed the applications."

"All right," said the juror, and the attorneys for neither side went further into the question.

Costs one cent for 5 continuous hours Burning Think of it! In addition to the brightest, purest and safest light that human brain has ever devised, the ALADDIN Lamp has a feature of still more vital importance. It saves oil. In spite of the fact that it gives a better light, it burns only one-third as much oil as any oil lamp manufactured of similar size. That means that the ALADDIN really costs you nothing, for in a short time you have saved its cost—then goes on saving money in oil as long as you burn it and with ordinary care it lasts a lifetime.
