Back to the Farm Goes Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Rheinstrom—However, He Has $30,000 a Year.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—Harry Rheinstrom, the son of a Cincinnati millionaire, who married Edna Loftus, the English actress against the wishes of his family, today completed negotiations for the purchase of thirty-acre ranch near the foothills. Mrs. Rheinstrom has announced that she intends to purchase six dozen chickens and "make a home for Harry."

Speaking of their proposed life on a farm she said: "I can bake, and I am proud of my puddings and pies. I am going to prove to Harry what a devoted wife can accomplish. There is plenty of fun in going to theaters but real happiness is at home with the man you love."

According to her plans Rheinstrom will plow the fields and do the heavy manual labor while she attends to the chickens and "makes butter." The young couple will not be dependent on their own efforts for their living however. Mrs. Rheinstrom, the mother of Harry, is a widow with $7,000,000 in her own name. She also has a large income from her late husband's estate. She granted the young man an annuity of $30,000 shortly after he married, following his acquittal on the charge of insanity which mother preferred against him when he announced his intention to marry the actress.

The life savers attempted to launch their boat but were buffeted back by the breakers that rolled in mountain high. The gun and line then were resorted to with success.

Man after man came ashore in the breeches buoy, which, beaten by the waves and pelted by hail, withstood the elements until all were rescued. Hardly had the last man left the Nelson when she sank. Almost immediately the schooner Libby struck. The life-line again was used by the men ashore and every person on the Libby was brought to safety.

The Libby seemed to withstand the pounding of the waves and it is believed that she can be saved.
