ELEPHANTS INDULGE IN A WINE DINNER

Nothing Checks Their Mad Career Until They Notice the Scale of Prices in Butcher Shops.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18.—To look at them today no one would suspect that the three elephants who made the night hideous long into the small hours of morning by a prolonged wine festival could consume anything but hay and peanuts. Yet the three pachyderms broke from their mahouts, disrupted a street parade, scattered a childish populace and ended a runaway career by breaching casks of breaking bottles in a Latin quarter wine shop.

The revolt of my lords, the elephants, was precipitated by the timidity of little "Babe," who weighs nearly as much as the amount of hay she eats a day. Babe knew where she was going, having been educated to the taste of wine during the Portland week last year.

Babe's two companions in the procession had heard of the excellencies of the product of a certain wine cellar. They invaded the place without hesitation and soon the red wine was flowing from broken casks, barrels and bottles.

After immersing goodly lengths of trunk in vats and barrels, the jungle beasts decided upon a free lunch. They entered an adjoining butcher shop and began chomping havoc among the steaks, chops and sausages.

Suddenly their eyes fell upon the scale of prices suspended over the precious packing house product and, with squeals of fright, the elephants withdrew and hastened to their quarters, according to the "faithful James" who presides over the publicity bureau of the California theater.

DR. LITTLEFIELD, PIONEER, DIES AT PORTLAND HOME

PORTLAND, Or., Feb. 18.—Dr. Horace R. Littlefield, a pioneer of Oregon and one of the most widely known physicians in the northwest, is dead at his home here today, following a long illness.

Dr. Littlefield, who was a native of Illinois, came to Oregon in 1869. In 1880 he was appointed surgeon-in-chief of the construction department of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company and in 1881 he accepted a like position on the western division of the Northern Pacific railroad. In this capacity Dr. Littlefield served in Oregon, Idaho and Washington until 1883, when he retired to private practice in Portland.

DIDN'T HAVE MUCH OF A SHOW, IT SEEMS

Two men were playing pinochle and one of them had held phenomenal luck, while the other couldn't pick up a count. Finally, when the lucky one was finally out and laid down "eighty kings," the defeated one leaned back in his chair and remarked: "I give it up. I haven't any more of a show than Hanford had the other night."

WOODVILLE BRIDGE IS COMPLETED

Judge Neil Makes Inspection Today—Best Bridge on Rogue—Delay Blessing in Disguise.

The county bridge across Rogue river at Woodville has been completed and is ready to turn over to the county.

Judge Neil, accompanied by E. D. Achey, superintendent of construction for the Columbia Bridge company of Portland, went to Woodville today to inspect the structure.

The bridge, constructed at a cost of $14,000, is of steel and is the best bridge now spanning the Rogue.

The rapid construction of the bridge was held back, first by lack of material—one car of steel being 47 days on the road from the east—and then by high water.

"It is perhaps fortunate," said Mr. Achey, "that I didn't have the material on the ground, for just about the time that high water came I would have had my false work up and the steel partially in place. As a consequence I would have lost the whole business."

Some of the Want Ads "Were Written for You"

In the course of a year a certain number of want ads are WRITTEN FOR YOU. That is, they have a greater interest for YOU than for anyone else in the city—hence are, in effect, "written for you." Here's the tantalizing part of it: You can't possibly know when they are to be printed unless you pay the price. The price is intelligent vigilance in reading the classified ads. No one can do it for you—and find the ads that were "written for you." You must do it yourself—or miss them.

And to keep missing the ads that were "written for you" is to keep aloof from the atmosphere of success—to keep your self out of touch with the prospering people, the winning people, the worth-while people.

After you find a few of the ads that were "written for you," you'll begin to find some of the chances and opportunities to prosper which daily life in this city hold FOR YOU! One cent a word. Six insertions for the price of five.
