HILL PLANS MORE ROADS IN OREGON

Ralph Budd, Who Was With Stevens in Panama, Has Been Doing Work for Some Time in Central Oregon.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Feb. 23.—It has just leaked out here that the Oregon Trunk has turned another neat little trick, very much after the fashion of President John F. Stevens' sensational and incongruous invasion of central and southern Oregon last summer.

Desiring to secure some detailed reports on certain engineering problems through different parts of the great untapped empire and knowing that his every movement would be watched if he undertook to get this information himself, Mr. Stevens sent to the Panama canal zone for his friend and former associate, Ralph Budd, chief engineer of maintenance and operation of the Panama railroad.

But Budd has been in Oregon for two months or more and he has been through new sections of country which the new Hill line is likely to develop. He has made reports on the feasibility of routes for a line clear across the state of Oregon east and west, and upon the strength of these recommendations the Oregon Trunk is dispatching engineering and surveying crews to do topographical work and run lines for extensions of the system of far greater magnitude than even the present main line now under construction up the Deschutes river, to cross the middle of the state from north to south.

Work From Both Ends. These crews will work from both the Idaho boundary in a westerly direction and from the present proposed terminus of the Oregon Trunk at Bend in a southeasterly direction until they meet. The surveyors who will map out the westerly course for a road to connect at the present proposed terminus in Crook county are working westward through the Jordan valley and along the headwaters of the Owyhee river. One crew is reported to be striking along a projected northern route which follows the general course of the Willamette valley and Cascade mountains military road and along the Malheur canyon through the Harney valley and to the northward of Steins mountains. The other bunch of men is said to be driving a line farther south, leaving the Owyhee river and picking up the Oregon Central military road below Steins mountains.

Lakeview and Burns. This reconnoitering on the part of the men now in the field indicates that the recent rumors about the Oregon Trunk heading for both Lakeview and Burns, eventually do not seem to be so far-fetched as some have supposed. This, despite the vigorous denials of Oregon Trunk officials. The gangs working north of the mountains mentioned will strike Burns, while the southerly crews will hit Lakeview, where the Hill line is expected to make its connections for California with the Western Pacific.

Chief Engineer Budd's recommendations are said to have favored both routes as outlined, but it is not known that any construction work is proposed in the far southeastern part of the state until the Oregon Trunk is in operation into the great central Oregon timber and dry-farming belts as now projected.

Assistant Engineer Stacer is the man who has been in charge of the surveying crews that are working toward the southeastward from Bend. Some of these men have been at work for many weeks in spite of the untoward weather, but their ranks are being recruited and they will push forward to meet the other engineers working toward them from the Idaho boundary.

Wild Gees Caught. Wild geese are becoming so domesticated in the Willamette valley that farmers are beginning to ship them to the market with tame variety. Last week a coop of geese was received by Frank Templeton, a Rose City commission merchant. It contained among the lot one of the hardest wild geese ever seen there. The wings of the bird had been cut so that it couldn't fly, but its spirit had not been conquered, as several parties who were foolish enough to place their fingers inside the coop can testify.
