JORDAN WOULD CURB VORIFEROUS STUDENTS
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., March 4.—President David Starr Jordan of the university today stands a proponent of a style of rooting which students characterized as "lady-like."
In a speech before a meeting of students President Jordan spoke of several phases of the rooting question which he deemed objectionable, particularly that of "rattling" the opposing players by noise-making devices.
The editor of the Daily Palo Alto has taken an opposite stand and in an editorial asserted that rooting should be made as much a part of the game as the "eighteen men and the umpire."

Sunday Wedding at Grants Pass.
Clarence C. Crow of Central Point and Miss Ella True Carey of Grants Pass were united in marriage at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. S. F. Morine, in the latter city, last Sunday at 4:30 p. m., Rev. Robert McLean of the First Presbyterian church performing the ceremony. Only immediate relatives and close friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the interesting ceremony, which was followed by an elegant wedding dinner, at which 12 covers were laid. The bride is one of Grants Pass' most charming and popular daughters and has many friends in that section. Mr. Crow is too well known to most of our readers as the affable and capable agent of the Southern Pacific at Central Point to need any introduction, and his many friends will unite in best wishes to himself and his bride.

HER TALL REBEL.

By MARIA D. FUREY.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

On Holborn street in London is a row of buildings that any sightseer passing on top of a motor bus would recognize at once as having been left among modern buildings from a past age. It is called the Staple Inn, and here Dr. Johnson wrote his "Idler."

One morning after the battle of Culloden, which ended the rebellion in Scotland led by the pretender, three Scotchmen who had been captured in arms against the king were being conducted past the Staple Inn to the Tower. A block stopped the sad cortege. One of the prisoners, MacDougal, was a very tall man, overlooking his fellows, and withal singularly handsome. A lady looking from the window of the inn called out to him:

"You tall rebel, you will soon be shorter by a head."
MacDougal turned a pair of large, mad eyes upon her and asked derisively:
"Does that give you pleasure, madam?"
"It does."
"Then, madam"—taking off his hat and making a low bow—"I do not die in vain."
The way having been cleared, the procession passed on, and the lady withdrew from the window.
MacDougal, soon after arriving at the Tower, was about to be led out to execution when the lieutenant received an order for a stay. Several days passed, the prisoner expecting death all the while, when the door of his cell was opened, and the lady who had spoken to him from Staple Inn entered. He looked at her in astonishment.
"We have met before," said the lady.
"I remember you well, madam. But I am at a loss as to the cause of this visit. For I shall soon be headless, and a headless man cannot serve a lady."
"Nevertheless your height will be improved."
"And would you prefer me shorter?"
"You would. You are too tall."
"You seem interested in cutting me down."
"I am interested in you."
"As Herodias was interested in John the Baptist."
"Your head, I admit, has recently seriously concerned me."
"I regret that I have not the power to give it to you. I can leave it to you by will, but I do not think the courts would regard the bequest of a rebel."
"Doubtless there is some fair maid who would prize your head."
"If its possession would give you pleasure you would be welcome to it, too, could I bestow it upon you."
"I would not deprive another of a coveted possession."
"There is none other who would prize it. But pray tell me to what may I attribute the honor of this visit?"
"A desire to see more of so good mannered a gentleman."
"I rejoice that my manners please you, madam, and regret that my height does not."
"But you will be shortened."
"My life will not be lengthened."
"You will not die in vain."
"True; I shall have the consolation of giving you pleasure."
"Say, rather, the pleasure of giving me pleasure. My pleasure is yours. Is it not?"
"Will you not show your appreciation of my devotion by leaving me to prepare for an end which may come at any moment?"
"Is my presence obnoxious to you?"
"At any other time it would be a pleasure to me."
"But you wish to be alone."
"Only on account of the nearness of death."
"Will nothing ruffle your politeness?"
"Nothing will affect my appreciation for so charming a woman."
"Why did you rebel against King George?"
"I believed Scotland would be benefited by Charles Edward."
"The king is a good man."
"Doubtless."
She handed him a slip of paper. He ran his eye over it. It read:
Let Lady — have access to her tall rebel, and be hanged to her.
GEORGE R.

"Drawing a piece of parchment from her corsage, she handed it to him. It was a pardon, beautifully engrossed within a decorative border. MacDougal looked up at his visitor for a moment, then sprang toward her and flung his arms about her. Under cover of heartless banter she had been talking the language of love. He had not interpreted her correctly, but now he understood. She suffered—no, returned—the embrace.
"Why did you rejoice at my approaching death?" he asked.
"Because you were an enemy of the king."
"And what changed you?"
"Your manners."
"If I'm rather a woman's weathercock nature. And you alone have saved me?"
"No; I have been assisted by the Earl of Sutherland and all the county of Ross."
The two passed out of the Tower together. History says nothing of the future of either, though they were real characters.

Points For Mothers

Tea and coffee are very harmful beverages for children. They give a feeling of rest when insufficient food has been taken, says a well known dietitian. This is what we call stimulation. What we mean is that the nerves have been acted upon so that we feel refreshed, although we have received no real strength such as comes to us from food. When children's nerves are abused in this way they will be irritable and weak and apt to become ill. Tea and coffee if used to excess weaken the kidneys. Coffee affects the heart and is dangerous if the heart is weak. Badly made tea is a real poison for both children and grown people. The following drinks are excellent substitutes for tea and coffee:
Milk—A real food. Makes blood and strength.
Cambic Tea—Equal parts of hot milk and water sweetened to taste.
Cocoa—A food drink. Makes flesh, heat and strength.
Cereal Coffee—A drink for variety. Will not affect the nerves.
Cocoa Shells—The outside of the cocoa bean ground fine. Not a food, but an excellent drink.

Bringing Up Children.
There are plenty of debatable points about how to bring up a child. Shall he use right hand and left equally? Shall he toddle to kindergarten at four or run wild, untought, till seven? Shall he ever under any circumstances be spanked? The world is not agreed. But on one subject enlightened opinion is unanimous—children must not be scared.
A shock is never justifiable. Therefore when there is screaming at the sea dip we temper the ordeal to swimming baths. For that fear of the dark that comes sometimes, no one knows whence, to children free from all boggy lore there are the humane night light and the comforting society of a plush bear as bedfellow. Everything should be delightfully and smoothly ordered. In fact, for a normal rising generation if only parents will restrain themselves and keep their nerves out of the nursery.

Teach Children to Be Fearless.
Don't run to baby and pick him up the minute he falls. The child whose mother runs to him and moans over him the minute he falls is a much to be pitied little man. Her terrified face and cry of "Are you hurt, darling? Tell mamma where. Poor little pet!" etc., will make him cry at once, whether he is hurt or not.
Very soon he will imagine that the slightest outward event hurts him and will grow peevish and fretful.
A child who is not fussed over by a nervous and adoring mother is very different. He may have many falls. He probably will. But very soon, with his mother's cheery "No damage done, dearie," in his ears, he will learn, unless things are really rather bad, to pick himself up and go on quite happily with his interrupted game.

The Value of Play.
The first self revelation of the child is through play. He learns by it what he can do, what he can do easily at first trial and what he can do by perseverance and contrivance.
Thus he learns through play to recognize the potency of those "lords of life," as Emerson calls them, that weave the tissue of human experience, volition, making and unmaking, obstinacy of material, the magic of contrivance, the lordly might of perseverance that can re-enforce the moment by the hours and time by eternity.
The child in his games represents to himself his kinship to the human race—his identity as little self with the social whole as his greater self.

A Valuable Hint.
Here is a plan adopted by the mother of a large family that is worth passing on.
She purchased a number of tiny bells that are sold in toyshops to sew to homemade rattles or similar toys, and when a bottle containing any kind of poison or poisonous mixture is added to the stock of home medicines a bell is threaded on a bit of narrow ribbon and then tied to the neck of the bottle. Thus all danger of making a mistake is avoided, because even though the bottle were taken from the shelf in the dark the tiny bell sounds its warning note.

To Amuse the Baby.
The mother who does her own work has frequent employment which cannot be interrupted—for instance, baking pies or cookies. To keep baby safe and amused one mother has put a dry goods box in a corner of the kitchen. The box is neatly painted and is padded with blankets. About the edge are tied all the favored toys on long strings. Baby throws them out of the box at pleasure, but finds it equally entertaining to pull them all back again.

Piano Fingers.
Children's nails sometimes get sore at the roots from practicing on the piano too incessantly when the nails are longer than they should be. Cut them very short for a time, even at the expense of ugly hands.

Extreme Measures.
If baby does not thrive on fresh milk it should be boiled.
