LA FEAN BILL CRUMBLES.

These five men, however, did the work of a regiment, and Mr. Whisler gives Congressman Hawley credit for laboring valiantly on their behalf. All manner of devices to illustrate their arguments against the bill were used, but none more effectively than that of demonstrating that the northwest box contains more than a bushel of apples. Every man who appeared before the committee was also placed under oath.

When Mr. Whisler left Washington he had the assurance of more than a majority of the committee that the bill would not be reported upon favorably, this session at least.

Waggoner Gives Up.

Coming back by way of Chicago, Mr. Whisler was entertained by William Waggoner, a commission man, who first originated the bill. Mr. Waggoner stated that if the bill failed this time he would make no further attempts to get it through congress. This means that the bill will be relegated to the past.

Those High-Priced Pears.

While Mr. Whisler was in New York he happened into a commission house just as the merchant received an order for four boxes of those 6 1/2-cent pears sold by the Bear Creek orchards in the fall. He asked to see them and states that he was surprised by the excellent condition they were in. The commission man stated that at 6 1/2 cents each they were the greatest bargain he had ever had. The four boxes went to one of New York's leading hotels at something like 40 cents each.

Mr. Whisler has done good work on his trip and the fruit men of the valley are giving him the glad hand now that he has returned.

Any auction that is to be held in this town ought to be well advertised in this newspaper—if it's at all important that people should attend it.

shall fulfill their pledges of an honest downward revision of the tariff. Buchanan, the defeated Republican, said:

"It is a demand that Canada be treated decently."
