Quinnox alone prevented the dragoons from cutting down the pallid madman who stumbled blindly toward the coaches beyond.

"Stop the coach!" cried King. Panic selsed the crowd. Olga Platanova stood alone, her eyes wide and glassy, staring as if petrified at the face of Truxton King.

He saw the object in her wavering hand. A plain, white faced farmer la a smock of blue was crossing the street with mighty bounds, his eyes glued archist. If he could only arrest that palsled, uncertain arm!

from the street, dazed, bewildered, but unhart. The revolutionists had begun the assault on the paralyzed minious of the government.

He looked back toward the gory entrance to the circus. There was Marlanx, mounted and swinging a saber on high. Ahead was a mass of carriages, filled with the white faced, palsled prey from the court of Graustark From somewhere near the spot where Olga Platanova fell came a harsh, penetrating command: .

"Cut them off! Cut them off from the castle!"

It was his cue. He dashed into the street and ran toward the carriages. shouting with all his strength: "Turn back! It is Marianx! To the castle!" Then it was that he saw the prince The boy was standing on a seat on the royal coach of state, holding out his eager little hands to some one in the thick of the crowd that surged about him. He was calling some one's name. but no one could have heard him.

Truxton's straining eyes caught sight of the figure in gray that struggled forward in response to the cries and the extended hand.

"Aunt Loraine! - Aunt Loraine!" He now heard the name the boy cried with all his little heart.

Two officers struck at the uncouth. desperate American as he lifted the girl from the ground and deliberately tossed her into the coach.

"Turn back!" he shouted. A horse man rode him down. He looked up as the plunging animal's hoofs clattered about his head. Vos Engo, with all. drawn sword, was crowding up to the carriage door, shouting words of retolding at sight of the girl be loved. He caught a glimpse of her, holding the prince in her arms, her white. agonized face turned toward the mob.

Distinctly he heard her cry:

"Save him! Save Truxton King!" From the sidewalks swarmed well hordes of desperadoes, firing wildly into the ranks of devoted guardsmen. Truxton fled from the danger zone as fast as his strained ankle would permit him. Bullets were striking all about him. Some one was shouting his name be hind in the scurrying crowd. He turned for a single glance backward. Little Mr. Hobbs, pale as a ghost, his cap gone, his clothing torn, was panting at his elbow.

"The prince is safe!" shouted King joyously. "They'll make it! Thank Colonel Quimos turned in his saddle and searched out the owner of that stirring voice.

"Come!" he called. Even as King rushed out into the roadway a horseman galloped up from the direction of the castle. He pulled his horse to his haunches almost as he was riding over the dodging Amer-

"Here!" shouted the newcomer, scowling down upon the young man "Swing up here! Quick, you fool!" It was Vos Engo, his face black with fury. Quinnox had seized the hand upon the arm of the frail, terrified an of Mr. Hobbs on seeing help for King and was pulling him up before him There was nothing for Truxton to do but to accept the timely help of his rival. An instant later he was up behind him and they were off after the last of the dragoons.

"If you don't mind, count, I'll try my luck," grated the American, Holding on with one arm, he turned and fired repeatedly in the direction of the howling crowd of rascals.

"Ride to the barracks gates, Vos Engo!" commanded Colonel Quinnox "Be prepared to admit none but the royal reserves, who are under standing orders to report there in time of Over his shoulder Vos Engo hissed to his companion: "It was not idle heroics, my friend, nor philanthropy on my part. I was commanded to Count Marians, have ordered the execome and fetch you. She would never have spoken to me again if I had re-

"She! Ab, yes, I see! She did not forget me!" cried Truxton. "Understand, it is not for you that I risk my life."

"I anderstand," murmpred Truxton, wry smile on his pale lips. "You mean, she is going to pay you in some way for picking me up, eh? Well, I'll put an end to that. I'll drop off again. Then you can ride on and tell her-I wouldn't be a party to the game. Do you catch my meaning?"

"You would, eh?" said the count angrily. "I'd like to see you drop off while we're going at this"-

"I've got my pistol in the middle of your back," grated Truxton. "Slow up a bit or I'll scatter your vertebrae all over your system. Pull up!"

"As you like," cried Vos Engo. "I've done my part. Colonel Quinnox will bear witness." He began pulling his horse down. "Now you are quite free to drop off."

Less than a hundred yards behind loped a riderless horse. The dragoon who had sat the saddle was lying far back in the avenue, a bullet in his head. Hobbling to the middle of the road. the American threw up his hands and shout- 2 ed briskly to the bewildered an imal. Five seconds later King was in the saddle and tearing along in retreating guard.

3 "We need such men as King!" KING WAS IN THE cried Colonel SADDLE. Quinnox as he waited inside the gates for the wild rider. General Braze, with a few of his men, bloody and heartsick, was the last of the little army to reach safety in the castle grounds.

The fortress, with all guns, stores and ammunition, was in the hands of the Iron Count and his cohorts.

Baron Dangloss had been taken prisoner with a whole platoon of fighting constables. This was the last appalling bit of news to reach the horrified. disorganized forces in the castle grounds.

A wise as well as a cruel man was Marianx. He lost no time in issuing a manifesto to the stunned, demoralized citizens of Edelweiss. Scores of criers went through the streets during the long, wretched afternoon, announcing to the populace that Count Marlanx had established himself as dictator and military governor of the principality pending the abdication of the prince and the beginning of a new and substantial regime. All citizens were commanded to recognize the authority of the dictator. Toward evening, after many sultations and countless reports, Marlanx removed his headquarters to the tower. He had fondly hoped to be in the castle long before this.

The cells and dungeons in the great old tower were now occupied by bruised, defeated officers of the law. Baron Jesto Dangloss, crushed in spirit and broken of body, paced the blackest and parrowest cell of them

At 9 o'clock on Sunday morning a small group of people gathered in the square. A meeting was soon in progess. A goods box stood over against the very spot on which Olga Platanova died. An old man began haranguing the constantly growing crowd. In the group might have been seen most members of the committee of ten. In the midst of his harangue the hand of William Spantz was arrested in one of its most emphatic gestures. Peter Brutus was approaching at the head of a group of allens, all armed. "One moment!" called out Peter Brutus, lifting his hand imperatively. The speaker ceased his mouthings "Count Marianx desires the immediate presence of the following citizens at his office in the tower. I shall call off the names." He began with Wil flam Spantz. The name of each of his associates in the committee of ten fol-

Ten minutes later every member of saber. In the center of the troop there the committee of ten, except Peter quite calm. Brutus, was behind lock and bar, together with their shivering associates all of them dumbly muttering to them selves the awful sentence that Marlanx had passed upon them.

"You are to die at sunset. Grau stark still knows how to punish assas sins. There is no room in Graustark for anarchy, I shall wipe it out to-

"Sir, your promise!" gasped William Spantz. "We are your friends-the true party of"-

"Enough! Do not speak again! Captain Brutus, you will send criers abroad to notify the citizens that L cution of the ringleaders in the plot to dynamite the prince, at sunset in the square. Away with the carrion!"

Then it was, and not till then, that the committee of ten found him out! Then it was that they came to know Peter Brutus!

The unrecognizable corpse of Olga Platanova had been buried in quicktime outside the city walls. There was something distinctly grewsome in the fact that half a dozen deep graves were dug alongside hers hours before death came to the wretches who were to occupy them.

At 3 o'clock the Iron Count coolly sent messengers to the homes of the leading merchants and bankers of the city. They, with the priests, the doctors, the municipal officers and the manufacturers, were commanded to appear before him at 5 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the welfare of the city and its people.

Marianx stated his position clearly. He left no room for doubt in their minds. The strings were in his bands. Without hesitation he informed the leading men of the city that he was to be the Prince of Graustark. "I will rule Graustark or destroy her. Those of you who do not expect or desire to live under my rule, which, I promise you, shall be a wise one, may leave the city for other lands." he said calmly, "just as soon as my deputies have completed the formal transfer of see this to appreciate it; $5000 all your belongings to the crown treas- terms. ury-all, I say, even to the minutest trifle. ed into bitter silence. "I am well aware that you love little, Prince Robin. Now, respecting young master Robin, I have no great desire to kill him." He waited to see the effect of this brutal announcement. His hearers stiffened, and-yes, they held their breath. "He has one siternative—he and his lords. I trust that you, as sensible gentlemen, will find the means to convey to him your advice that he seize the opportunity I shall offer him to es cape with his life. Let me interrupt myself to call to your attention the fact that I am punishing the anarchists at sunset. To resume, the boy may return to America, where he belongs. I will give him free and safe escort to the United States. If he chooses to accept my kindly terms, all well and good; if not, gentlemen, I shall starve him out or blow the castle down. It may interest you to bear that I expect to establish a new nobility in Graustark. I trust I may now be addressing at least a few of the future noble lords of Graustark. Good day, gentle-

At the castle the deepest gloom prevalled. It was like a nightmare to the beleaguered household, a dream from which there seemed to be no awakening. Colonel Quinnox as commander of the royal guard ruled su preme. General Braze tore off his own epaulets and presented himself. to Quinnox as a soldier of the file.

Prince Robin, quite recovered from his fright, donned the uniform of a colonel of the royal dragoons, buckled on his jeweled sword and, with boyish zeal. demanded at a council of war Colonel Quinnox's reasons for not going forth to slay the rioters.

Your highness," said the colonel bitterly, "the real army is outside the walls, not inside. We are a pitiful handful, less than 300 men all told, counting the wounded. Count Marlanx heads an army of several thousand. He'-

At night two attempts were made by Haddan and another subaltern to leave the castle to reach Tullis, but both sortles proved failures. A day later Marlanx sent two men under a fing of truce to offer his infamous ultimatum. His offer of a safe conduct of the prince to America was refused. for the inmates of the castle knew full well the count would doom the lad to instant death if he should get him in his possession.

A single distant volley at sunset had ouzzled the men on guard at the castle. They had no means of knowing that the committee of ten and its wretched friends had been shot down like dogs in the public square. Peter Brutus was in charge of the squad of executioners
