STOLEN HORSE IS RECOVERED TOO LATE

Not That the Animal Was Injured, But It Was Taken While Being Returned to Its Owner.

GOLD HILL, April 16.—The News today says:

Arrested for stealing the horse he was riding, when the animal belonged to his father, to whom he was taking it, was the unique experience of a young man from Myrtle Creek, near Roseburg, in a little comedy of errors which was enacted in Gold Hill. Marshal Hammersly had received notice from Sheriff Fenton of Douglas county to arrest and hold a young man, smooth-shaven, height five feet, weight 135 pounds, riding a buckskin horse weighing 900 pounds, with a kidney sore, light-colored saddle with one modern stirrup pin. Wednesday morning a horse and man answering both descriptions exactly went through town at a gallop. The marshal caught a glimpse of them. He saddled one of Darling & Hodges' horses and overtook the stranger just beyond the Rock Point bridge. The man at once admitted that he was riding the stolen horse, but said that he was P. B. Weaver, the son of the owner, was on his way back to Myrtle Creek, where the horse had been stolen, and that the horse thief had been arrested at Jacksonville by the deputy sheriff of Douglas county. However, he had no identification papers, so he came into town with the marshal to await corroboration of his statement. A wire to Sheriff Fenton at Roseburg cleared things up by bringing a reply saying that the thief had been arrested at Jacksonville and verifying the balance of the stranger's story. After a few hours' delay, which he took good-naturedly, realizing that he talked with the description of the horse-thief, Mr. Weaver was again on his way.

Another Industry for Gold Hill.

GOLD HILL, April 16.—A mission furniture factory is the latest addition to Gold Hill's rapidly growing list of industrial enterprises. Frank Burnett, who has for some time been located at Grants Pass, has decided that Gold Hill affords an excellent opening for big line of business. Mr. Burnett is a pioneer in an industry which is bound to become important, as the possibilities of the Oregon fir and other native woods in the manufacture of furniture become better known.

Kell's Fish Screen in Use.

One of Charles Kell's new patented fish screens, which has been recommended by the state fish warden, has been placed in the irrigation ditch on James U. Smith's Sardine creek ranch. Mr. Smith has been using stationary screens, and they have given him a good deal of trouble by clogging, but if the Kell screen works as well as it has in trials it will require very little attention. Mr. Kell is a resident of Gold Hill.

SAYS EGGS SPREAD TUBERCULAR GERMS

State Veterinary Files Report Stating That the White Plague Is Spread by Diseased Eggs.

PORTLAND, Or., April 17.—Eggs laid by tubercular hens serve as a medium to spread tuberculosis, according to W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian, whose report has just been filed with Dr. Calvin White, secretary of the state board of health. This discovery is considered to be one of much importance and has opened up a new field of danger from the white plague. Dr. Lytle assures the people, however, that if eggs are well cooked there can be but little danger of contracting disease from eating them.

The report says: "Tuberculosis in fowls has been discovered in some four centers throughout the state. These being in widely separated districts, we are at a loss to account for the introduction of this disease, unless it be from human or other animal source. Generally the disease has been found to be closely associated with cases of human tuberculosis, and in the one case where this was not found to be the case, the infected chicken had been recently purchased from a poultry farm, where it was impossible to trace possible means of infection."

WILL PROTECT TRACKS WITH CONCRETE SHEDS

Great Northern Making Preparations to Do Away With Danger of Slides Like That at Wellington.

OLYMPIA, Wash., April 16.—The Great Northern railway plans to protect its line through the Cascade mountains with snow sheds built of concrete, according to information brought to this city today by Assistant Attorney-General Tanner, who has been on a tour of the state with members of the state railway commission. Had the section of line in the vicinity of Wellington been covered with the concrete sheds it is believed the disaster last month to the two passenger trains, which cost nearly a hundred lives, would have been averted. Besides, with the tracks unprotected, the expense to the railroad company in clearing the mountain divisions of snow and slides amounts to thousands of dollars every winter.

After the social season many pieces of jewelry, watches, trinkets, etc., are in need of repair—allow us, therefore, to recommend OUR repair department for the repairing of your articles.

Will Give All He Has to Church.

EVERETT, Wash., April 16.—To prevent A. W. Alloway, a wealthy farmer of Snohomish county, from giving away everything he owns to the Church of Good Society, W. P. Alloway, a son, has been appointed guardian of his father and mother by the supreme court here.

Alloway, it was testified, has sent about $20,000 to a Mrs. Weise, head of the sect, which was organized here, but recently migrated to Southern California. Alloway admitted today that he had given away that much and would have donated more, as he had been commanded to do so by the Lord, with whom he conversed as he would with a man, he said.

WOMEN ARE URGING "MILITANT METHODS"

Young Women on Washington's Streets Urge Suffragists to Adopt More Strenuous Methods.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 16.—Misses Ray Costello of England and Alice Paul of Philadelphia are making street speeches here today urging the suffragists to adopt "militant methods." They are also explaining the attitude of the suffragists toward President Taft.

ing street speeches here today urging the suffragists to adopt "militant methods." They are also explaining the attitude of the suffragists toward President Taft.

A copy of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt's speech, which by inference took exception to the views expressed in an address before the delegates to the National Woman Suffrage association convention, was today sent to the White House.

The convention has voted to send a copy of the speech to every politician in the country, "from the president down."
