NEW LAUNDRY IS PROMISED

Stock in New Concern Subscribed—Centrally Located Lot Purchased and Contract for Building Being Closed—New Machinery Ordered

The formation of a new laundry company, undertaken by Mr. Paulson some time ago, is rapidly reaching its final goal.

The stock in this new company has all been subscribed, a centrally located lot has been purchased, a contract for the building is being closed and ground for its erection will be broken Monday.

A complete line of new machinery of the latest type for doing a general laundry business was ordered some time ago, and the shipment will begin to arrive by the last of next week.

The boiler and engine will be in place as soon as the foundations are complete. In all probability, unless unforeseen delay should occur, this plant will be in full operation by the middle of next month.

The machinery will be installed as fast as the construction of the building will permit, so that plant and building will be completed at the earliest date possible.

It has taken considerable time to get this project under way, but now that the stock has all been subscribed the completion of the plant will receive no further delay.

The plant will be thoroughly equipped with the best and most labor-saving devices and its aim will be to give the patrons of Medford a high-class laundry product.

There is no other town in Oregon the size of Medford that can boast of having two laundries. The fact that Medford will be thus ably equipped demonstrates the Medford spirit of keeping in the lead with the best of everything.

Mr. Paulson wishes to thank those who have given him encouragement and their good-will, as well as those who have given him financial support.

Mr. Paulson, being a laundryman and having gained his knowledge from a hand laundry to a steam plant, he is fully able to assure the people that the best will be none too

Professor McAdie Devises New System Which May Revolutionize the Present Systems.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 23.

Professor Alexander McAdie, head of the local weather bureau, has devised systems of thermometer and barometer computations which simplify and may revolutionize the present systems of reading weather conditions throughout the world. His systems have already been adopted by the meteorological offices of Great Britain and Germany.

Both the systems do away with the accepted units of meteorological measurement and give new standards. The present system for barometric measurements is gauged by the inches of pressure.

By the new system, instead of reading the inches of the barometer the observer reads the percentage of the standard atmosphere.

In his new thermometer, Professor McAdie has done away with both the Fahrenheit and the centigrade systems. Instead of making his zero point at 32, as in the Fahrenheit, or "0," as in the centigrade, he has placed zero as absolute zero, that point at which gas has no motion. By this means all minus computations are done away with and a definite standard to work from is given.
