

HISTORIC STORE IS RECALLED BY CHANGED FRONT

Remodeling of Angle Building Recalls Old Angle & Plymale General Merchandise Store, Which Was Opened in 1883.

The remodeling of the front of the Angle building marks the removal of one of the historic stores in Medford.

It was in 1883 that Angle & Plymale opened a general merchandise store on this site. Later a brick building was erected and for many years William Angle and the late Francis Plymale engaged in general merchandise there. The other half was occupied by Charles Strang as a drug store.

Later still, C. L. Cranfill occupied the room and for over 12 years sold goods there.

The store front is unique from the fact that the old-fashioned iron doors, such as were in universal use a quarter century ago, are still in place, but are to be removed. Also the window shades still bear the insignia, "Angle & Plymale, General Merchandise," a decade or more after the firm passed out of existence.

The changes in the front of the old building will make some of the original customers of the store guess as to their probable location in Medford. The room is being fitted up for a moving-picture theater and Mr. Cranfill has transferred his stock of goods to his residence on South Central avenue.

CHURCHMEN ARE TO UPLIFT THE PRESS

Will Strive for a Week in Dallas to Issue Paper "as Christ Would Edit It"—Editor Takes to Woods.

DALLAS, Ore., May 12.—The management of the Polk County Itemizer will be turned over to the Methodist Church, and churchmen will publish the paper for a week, "as Christ would edit it."

A percentage of the receipts will be turned over to the church.

Rev. M. E. Spahr, the local pastor, will act as managing editor. Superior Judge Stouffer will superintend the editorial page. He will also be the city editor. Church members will do reporting and solicit advertising.

While the paper is being published by the churchmen, Editor Fiske said he will take a week's outing in the woods.
