in Wall street and that he was in a position to make good in building a trolley line and fulfill any promises that he might make.

"The electric line will mean a great deal to Ashland. We must remember that it will be many years before such a line will even pay interest on the bonds, and that capital demands certain things in franchises before such money will be available. I am convinced, from what Mr. Allen has said, that he will meet all objections half way and that an amicable agreement can be fixed up, which will satisfy most of the objections made to the franchise."

To Meet Objections.

Captain M. P. Eggleston, city recorder, stated that while it would be impossible to modify the franchise and that it would have to be voted upon in its present form, Mr. Allen could in his acceptance make certain modifications without invalidating the franchise, and suggested that such an agreement be made. This Mr. Allen agreed to, and will meet with the committee appointed to draw up such an agreement today.

W. I. Vawter of Medford was called upon to speak, as was J. C. Enyart. Both disclaimed any interest in the proposed line other than that of citizens looking to the future development of the valley. Both professed ignorance of the terms of the franchise, but dwelt upon what the trolley line would mean to the entire country. They recounted Mr. Allen's efforts in Southern Oregon, how he had always made good and what a benefit it would be to Ashland to have him interested in the community.

Other Club Business.

The club voted to table the matter of a display at the Chicago land show. Telegrams were authorized sent to Washington protesting against the cutting of timber in the reserve as destroying the beauty of the Ashland canyon. Bills incurred in the entertainment of Lewis Hill were ordered paid, and committees appointed to push the Normal school campaign were ordered to report as to their efforts. A shortage in the required funds was commented upon and efforts will be made to increase the contributions.

TAFT MAKES PEACE PACT.

the bill become immediately effective has added a complication. The senate insurgents yesterday asked the house insurgents to accept the senate bill as it stands instead of sending the two bills to conference. If this should be done the conference would be unnecessary and the senate bill would become the measure finally sent to the president. If the house agreed to this idea there would be no chance of making any amendment whatever and the president's immediately effective clause could not be inserted.

The senate insurgents planned to move, fearful that the conference committee would make radical changes in the measure and that the force of the administration would be strong enough to send it through without the amendments for which the insurgents fought desperately in the senate.

The plan appealed to the house insurgents and today 25 of them are lined up for the senate bill in the house. As in other house insurgent fights, however, the concurrence of the democrats must be secured, and it is not yet made evident what attitude they will take. Should they side with the insurgents the senate regulars and the house organization men who are believed by the democrats to have planned to remove the insurgent amendments in conference would be defeated, the rate increase would be suspended for at least 60 days by the president's agreement and the suit against the railroads, which would still be pending, would be in effect up to the time the congressional campaign would be well under way.

A question of "good politics" enters into the attitude of the house democrats. Should the bill be stripped of the insurgent amendments in conference some of the democratic leaders believe they would benefit in the coming campaign. If they should side with the insurgents and consent to the adoption of the senate bill, the administration bill, they argue, would be embarrassed by the elimination of the immediately effective clause.

Another factor that enters into the situation is the fact that should the conference committee change the bill too freely it might not be concurred in by the house, and should it be rejected or sent back to conference the democrats might be in a position to play good politics in the squabble that would ensue.

GIRL COMMITS SUICIDE BECAUSE OF SCOLDING

RENO, Nev., June 7.—Because her grandfather reprimanded her for secretly attending a dance against his wishes, 17-year-old Lois Holland, daughter of Charles Holland, proprietor of a hotel at Yerington, is said to have committed suicide, according to a dispatch published here today. She wrote three letters asking for forgiveness and addressed them to her elder sister, her grandfather and a man friend.

Lois and her sister were visiting their grandfather, 17 miles from Yerington. Sunday they asked permission to attend a dance and the grandfather refused to grant it. The girls retired to their rooms and after the family had gone to bed they slipped out and drove to town.

Their grandfather noticed the condition of the horse Monday morning and questioned the girls, who confessed to the trip. A reprimand was given them and later in the day the sound of a shot brought members of the family to Lois' dead body back of the house.

HOUSE REJECTS RAILROAD BILL

By Vote of 162 to 125, Lower Body Refuses to Stand for Senate Measure and Asks for a Conference—Insurgents Vote for Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.—By a vote of 162 to 125 the house voted to reject the senate railroad regulation bill and asked for a conference. Most of the insurgents voted in favor of accepting the senate bill.

When debate began Mann took the floor.

"The senate amendments," he said, "make changes in the bill that would make a mule laugh. In one place the senate declared its intention of amending the original bill by adding a 'paragraph' and then it went it one better and added two paragraphs."

"The bill absolutely opens the door to rates and absolutely repeals existing rebate laws."

Mann also declared that the supreme court has held that no courts can pass on the reasonableness of rates, hence the senate bill empowering courts to do so would make endless litigation.

Lenroot, who spoke in favor of the senate bill, declared that the senate bill was better than any that the conference could be expected to report.

"The senate bill provisions in the interests of the public probably will not remain in the bill after conference," he said.

The towns of Valladolid, Miguel and Chama are reported to have been attacked, looted and their inhabitants slain or dispersed.
