STRIKEBREAKERS ARE EXPECTED IN PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Ore., June 15.—Two hundred strike breakers are expected here some time this afternoon to mount the idle wagons and attempt to break the tea-masters' strike which has for three weeks tied up shipments and caused the loss of thousands of dollars to warehouses, wholesale men and shippers.

Indications today are that the strike has entered upon a serious stage and that trouble cannot much longer be avoided.

Today mounted police were stationed at every dock along the water front and at the warehouses. This is but one of the many evidences of the trouble to come.

President Banfield of the Employers' association, said today that he would walk out of Portland penitentiary before he would give in to the demands of the strikers for a 25 cent daily wage increase. Banfield's declaration is taken to represent the attitude of all the employers. This means that the power of approximately fifty million dollars in invested wealth will be swung to crush the demands of 400 teamsters.

QUEEN MARY MAY GET ENGLAND'S THRONE

LONDON, June 15.—Premier Asquith today introduced a bill in the house of commons for the appointment of Queen Mary as regent in the event of the death of King George instead of the Duke of Connaught, the king's uncle.

It is reported that King George has demanded that the Duke of Connaught be appointed Governor General of Canada to succeed Governor General Grey.

ED ANDREWS HAS PRAISE FOR SHOW

Critic Reviews Athon Stock Company and Has Nothing But Laudatory Remarks to Make of Company.

The Athon Stock company, which opened their summer season Monday night at the opera house, did so under the most favorable conditions. Last night their success was repeated. The bill is a four-act play, entitled "The Powers That Be."

The plot of this piece is a popular one just now, as it shows up the corrupt methods of municipal politics in the larger cities. It is very much like "The Man of the Hour" that has had so successful a run in the east of late, though we think it can be said with truth that "The Powers That Be" is the stronger play of the two, inasmuch as it has a better love story for the counter plot.

A stock company playing a summer season is something new for Medford, and the lovers of entertainment are watching the initial performances with interest, for it is the general talk that if this company makes good, their engagement will be a financial success. Well, they made good, as the frequent curtain calls and hearty applause amply demonstrated each evening. Of course, a first performance with a company containing new members, unaccustomed to each other, is a trying ordeal, but Mr. Athon and his company crossed the Rubicon most successfully.

As to the personnel of the company, it can be said that they are all good, and some of the cast exceptionally fine. Mr. Howard, who played the part of Burton Clark, is an actor of unusual ability. He has a fine stage presence, never over-acting, but always maintaining a consistent character. He is an educated gentleman, whom it is a pleasure to know. Robert Athon played a part that requires a display of animal force, rather than subtle mentality, but he did it well. His makeup was good, and he portrayed the character with whom we are all more or less familiar. Bert Heyes was the millionaire grasping and avaricious. Mr. Heyes is a thoroughly earnest worker, and if there were any criticism, it might be said that, at times, he was a little over-anxious. This, however, comes from a first performance, and we are sure that he will maintain his part with the rest of the cast.

James Conway played the light comedy in a most successful manner. He is a good looking young man, bright and intelligent. Miss Olga Gray is the leading lady of the company, a most trying position to fill. She must be an actress and she must be pretty. Miss Gray is all this, and, as the Frenchman would say, "Que Voulezvous, encore?" Miss Gray is still young, and to place her among the great actresses would be, perhaps, bordering on flattery, but to say that she is the making of a great artist, is but stating a plain fact.

Effie Johnson is the soubrette, a sweet little girl, bright and vivacious, who laughs and capers her way into the hearts of her audience. We must not forget Dorothy Davis, who played a most trying role last evening. The part she played is a difficult one, as it represents a woman of the world, with an underlying element of good that, after all, predominates. She brought out the dual character most effectively. The other members of the cast, in minor roles, were all very satisfactory.

Suffice it to say that Medford has given the stamp of her approval to the Athon Stock company, and we shall look forward with pleasure to this company will give us during the summer season. E. M. A.

ATTEMPTS FLIGHT FOR A PRIZE OF $5000

TOPEKA, Kan., June 15.—J. C. Mars, in the Curtiss bi-plane "Sky-lark," today started for Overland park, near Kansas City. After two bad starts, caused by failure of the motor to work properly, Mars succeeded in getting away at 7:30 a. m. The distance is 56 miles by air line. The prize is $5,000.

Mars passed Perry at 8:15 and flew 15 miles in 24 minutes to Lawrence, where he was forced to descend to repair his engine. The aeroplane was damaged when it landed at Lawrence.

Justice Moody May Retire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—Senator Lodge of Massachusetts introduced a bill in the senate today providing that Justice Moody of the United States supreme court be permitted to retire.

Justice Moody has been seriously ill for a long time. He could not regularly retire until he reaches the age of 70 years.

Young Folks

A JOKE ON THE COMPANY.

A Second Sight Trick With a Humorous Ending.

This amusing trick of "second sight" may be enacted with great success at any evening's entertainment.

A blackboard, a piece of chalk and a sheet of paper are the necessary requirements. First announce to the company that if any one or number of the persons before you write down any word or number of words upon the paper that you, without seeing the paper, will then write upon the blackboard those very words.

Of course every one will smile incredulously at this remarkable statement and at once call upon you to prove what you claim you can do.

When the paper is ready direct it to be hidden while you turn your back, and when the paper is invisible then is the time when you make ready for your share of the fun, which in the end will be the lion's share.

Place the blackboard in a position so the audience cannot see the front of it, and then assume an attitude of deep concentration, as if you were calling up the invisible writing. Then say, "Now, if some one will kindly read aloud what is on the paper it will prove that I have written those very words."

The paper is read, and the time has arrived to turn the board around. When the spectators see what is on it the laugh will certainly be on them, for you have done exactly what you boasted you would do—written "those very words."

Boomerangs For the Firesides.

The peculiar weapon of the natives of Australia is the boomerang, a curved blade of wood of such remarkable construction that it swerves from its direct course, sometimes returning so as to hit an object behind the thrower.

Model boomerangs for indoor amusement can be easily made with cardboard. Cut the cardboard out in any of the shapes shown in the cut and take care that it is not bent in any way and that it lays flat on a table.

This indoor boomerang is so light that it cannot be thrown like the genuine article by the hand. Lay the boomerang on a book, with one end projecting over the side. Hold the book up level with the eye and give a smart tap to the projecting piece with a lead pencil. Take care to strike only the side of the boomerang. It will be found to dart forward a considerable distance, then turn and come back to near where it started.

Lend a Hand—or Both.

Have you ever noticed what a curious effect it gives to lend your arms to somebody else? This is not a question of giving aims, simply of lending them for a few moments. This is the way to do it:

Let your friend clasp her hands behind her back and then slip your arms in through hers, so that from the front your arms look as if they belonged to her. If she wears a shawl the effect will be better, and unless you are very much shorter than she you must crouch down, so that the people won't see your head above hers. It is really very curious to see how different people look with some one else's hands, which are surprisingly unobtrusive. Then with your hands you can go through all sorts of poses—clap them, shake them, pretend to cry (that is, hold a handkerchief to your friend's eyes), rearrange the shawl or assume a thoughtful pose. If you want to give a really funny performance let the front person wear a long robe to cover up the one in back and then let her recite some dramatic poem, while the other makes appropriate and exaggerated gestures. Usually the person who lends the arms will find it more comfortable to lean on a stool instead of stooping.

An Armored Nest.

In the Argentine Republic, says a writer in the Strat, where the summers are long and hot, it is customary to leave the windows open both day and night during the hottest part of the year. A bird, taking advantage of this, proceeded to build a nest in my room, fixing it firmly to one of the venetian blinds over the window. The eggs were duly hatched and the young birds fledged. On taking down the empty nest I found it to be practically armor-plated, the outer part being composed almost entirely of rusty nails, woven in among the hay. On counting the nails I found that no fewer than sixty-six had been used, besides some wire and pins taken from my dressing table. The bird was about the size of a robin and very tame.

My Dog Curt.
I have a little curly dog
As black as black can be,
And when I go about the farm
Curt always goes with me.

We caught a muskrat in a trap
Down by the willow fence.
We sold the skin and had a treat
With what we got—ten cents.

They asked if I would sell my dog
And take his skin off too.
I said no one would skin my Curt,
Not ever, if I knew!
