

EASY VICTORY FOR JEFF.

want to stipulate an extra number of rounds, should they be necessary, we will be ready to go ahead to the extreme limit, by which I mean that Johnson will fight until either he or Jeffries is knocked out."

The Jeffries camp treats with scorn the suggestion that Johnson will last 45 rounds. The most pessimistic man at Moana cannot concede that the negro will be on his feet more than 30 rounds, and the possibility of a draw has never entered their minds.

Sam Berger's Opinion.

Berger, when told of Flanagan's stand, said:

"What is the use of crossing a bridge before reaching it? The fight isn't going 45 rounds, and Johnson need not figure that it will be necessary for Jeffries to go into extra rounds to reach a decision. Would Jeffries go beyond the 45 rounds if both men were on their feet at the end and Rickard was unable to reach a decision? Now you're trying to cross the bridge before coming to it."

Whatever Berger's interest may be in the matter, Farmer Burns, who has greatest confidence in Jeffries' ability than in anybody in camp, would be willing to let Jim go 100 rounds if that number be necessary in order to arrive at a decision, but it will not be up to Farmer Burns to decide that question should it arise.

Army of Doctors.

That the small army of physicians to be in the receiving hospital to erect within the arena expect to be kept busy is shown by the preparations they are making. Injury to the fighters is not bothering them as they know that the physical condition into which Jeffries and Johnson have worked themselves is such as to make it practically impossible for the contestants to inflict injuries usually suffered by well trained fighters; barring, of course, such accidents as sent Tommy McCarthy to his grave following the battle with Owen Moran in San Francisco. It is to the spectators that they look for patients and the larger number of cases that they expect to treat are heat prostration and victims of heart trouble superinduced by the excitement of the contest and the altitude.

Henry Royce left today to look after his hay and stock interests in Klamath County.
