DEFENDS CHARACTER OF MRS. CRIPPEN

CHICAGO, Ill., July 19.—Bruce Miller, former actor and well-to-do real estate dealer, in a statement to the United Press today defended the character of Mrs. Crippen, the woman the London police allege to have been murdered in London by her husband, Dr. Hawley Crippen, the American dentist.

Miller declared he knew the Crippens well, but ridiculed the report that he and Mrs. Crippen had at one time planned to elope.

"I was on the vaudeville stage from 1898 to 1904, during which time our acquaintance continued. The Crippens left for England in 1904, and I haven't seen them since."

LITTLE MONEY YIELDED BY POLICE COURT

So far as fines paid in the police court this morning, there was mighty little profit. With four up the judge could find but one live one.

Frank Clark was drunk—very drunk, Monday afternoon. He had no money, but had seen a sign of men wanted on a ranch. He was given the option of ten days or looking for that ranch. He started to look.

Thomas Bogue came from Eugene. He was using language on a crowded street not fit for ears polite. He was penitent and said he had a job; also he had a few dollars—$2.75, to be exact.

The judge sized him up and said: "I'll fine you $5 and will take $2 of this on account. Now, you get on that job and come back here Saturday night with $3 more."

One Jack Richards was brought in with a head on him that looked as if he had been hit by a pile-driver—not once, but several times. He didn't know who hit him, nor why. He was advised to put as much space as possible between him and the city limits. He started right away.

Frank Rose was the man accused of beating up the other fellow, but both denied it, and Rose was shipped also. Rose said in departing: "I had more money than that on me when I was arrested, but I won't say anything about it."

"I wouldn't, if I were you," said his honor. "The less you have to say and the sooner you get out of town the better off you will be. Don't undertake to tell me that any of this police force has taken money from you. Get out!" and Mr. Rose departed hurriedly.

CRIPPEN MURDER MYSTERY IS NOW DARKER THAN EVER

Every New Feature Uncovered, Instead of Being Helpful, Upsets the Police Theory of the Case—Crippen May Have Landed in Montreal

LONDON, July 19.—Although the police have decided that as yet there is no official evidence that a murder was committed in the home of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen at Islington, the details surrounding the finding of the body, supposed to be that of a woman and whom the police still believe was Mrs. Crippen, indicate that one of the most brutal murders in the history of the London police has been unearthed.

Regents canal was dragged today in the hope of finding the feet, hands, head and portions of the torso which have not yet been found and which were cut from the mangled portions of the body found in the quicklime bath under the cement floor of the cellar in the Crippen home.

FISH CANNOT GET OVER GOLD RAY DAM

Deputy Fish Warden Sam Sandry was in Medford Tuesday and reports confiscating a seine containing 165 pounds of salmon under the toe of the Ament dam. Warrants are out for the arrest of the owners.

Mr. Sandry reports fish can get over the Ament dam, but not over the Ray dam. The low water has made it next to impossible for fish to find the latter. He is here to supervise the small necessary repairs, which the Rogue River Electric company is expected to make, so that fish can locate the ladder.

LOCAL FIRM FILES ATTACHMENT ON AUTOS

VANCOUVER, Wash., July 19.—The carload of automobiles sent here and thought to belong to W. S. Wood is having a strenuous time. Wood has arrived and claimed the machines. Recently Stull & Darst, co-partners, of Medford, Or., have filed suit for attachment against the Northwestern Carriage & Automobile company, and one of the machines was attached today to satisfy a claim for $300.
