ONLY AVERAGE APPLE CROP

Some Sections Have Total Failure, Others Light Yield, But Majority of Fruitgrowing Districts Show Increased Yield Over Year Ago.

The apple crop all over the United States at present averages well. In order to arrive at a fair estimate of the probable yield and the prospects for the immediate future, says the New York Fruit Trade Journal, which recently conducted a most careful investigation among growers and shippers in all the leading producing sections and specialists on the ground who are in close touch with the situation. The result of this inquiry follows:

It has been found possible to obtain information and data from so many who are identified with the growing and shipping of apples, that the limitation of space precludes the possibility of publishing only a limited number of the reports received.

The almost unanimous opinion of experts in every growing section of the United States is that the crop as a whole does not justify expectations of extravagant or even high prices. The loss by frost or deterioration from some other cause in one section is likely to be offset by the success in another district. In fact, it is the expectation that the yield will be ample, but there is nothing to show that it will reach the figures of 1904 or 1909, or that ever-memorable crop of 1896, which is still the theme of discussion wherever apple growers and shippers assemble.

Western New York stands out conspicuously as one of the eastern states that will produce considerably more apples this year than in 1909. The feature of the situation there is the promising outlook for winter varieties. Baldwins will be plentiful, Greenings are only fair, while Russets are light, but on the whole, the prospects are promising. California will have a full crop of all kinds except Bellefleurs, and other sections of the Pacific coast, Montana alone excepted, gives promise of an abundant yield. The great southwest, which includes the Ozark region, has cut little figure in apples for the past three years, and the chances of this section reversing the record this year are the reverse of promising. Virginia and West Virginia will produce more than last year, and so will Arkansas. Missouri a little better than the growers expected earlier in the season.

Conditions in Pennsylvania are disappointing, but the outlook in the New England states, Maine alone excepted, is bright. The yield in New Hampshire and Vermont will be larger than that of last season. The Nebraska crop will be slightly heavier than that of 1909. Illinois will not have enough for home consumption; Ohio and Indiana will produce more than last season, while the Michigan and Colorado crops will be lighter.

The crop of the Canadian provinces is always important commercially. This year the yield in Nova Scotia, Ontario and the Annapolis valley will be normal. The British Columbia Fruit-Growers' association is positively enthusiastic over the outlook for apples and says that the winter varieties in that district will be very plentiful and in excess of last season's yield. Beyond limited home consumption, Canada's crop must find a market in Europe, chiefly in England, and this is one reason why it must such a figure in the apple deal from a merchantable point of view.

GIRLS FIRST TO PROBE MURDER

Young Women Now Appearing in Tacoma Tell of Their Association With Crippen Case at the Very Start.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 3.—"When Dr. Crippen told us many weeks after his wife's sudden disappearance that she had died in Los Angeles, we just did not believe it, and we secured evidence which finally started the Scotland Yard detectives on the case."

So said Miss Cecilia McCarthy of the Music Hall Ladies' guild of London, who, with her two sisters, is appearing at a local theater this week.

The Ladies' Guild of professional actors is the organization in which Mrs. Crippen was known as Belle Elmore on the stage, was treasurer when she disappeared and this organization first started the investigation which finally ended in the sensational chase and capture of Crippen and Miss Leneve.

"We knew Mrs. Crippen quite well," said Mrs. McCarthy. "She was the honorary treasurer of the guild. She was a very amiable person and refused any salary for the arduous work she performed. The guild, which is composed of music hall artists, numbers several hundred members. Mrs. Crippen attended those meetings very regularly. On the third of February the committee received a note purporting to come from Mrs. Crippen, in which it was stated that she had received a cablegram and was compelled to leave at once for America and that the guild had better elect a new treasurer as she would be away for a long while. At that time we could not have suspected anything wrong, yet every one felt as though she had received an awful shock. It was not at all like Mrs. Crippen to go away so suddenly."

"Then Dr. Crippen told us she had died in Los Angeles. We could not believe it. Then in the early part of April Dr. Crippen attended a dance given by the Benevolent fund, which is a male charity organization composed of actors, and he took Miss Leneve to the dance.

"Mrs. Crippen had a wealth of diamonds. What shocked the ladies of the guild most was the fact that Miss Leneve, Dr. Crippen's typist, with whom he was seen quite frequently about town, was wearing some of the dresses that belonged to Mrs. Crippen.

"Finally we wrote to the city officials at Los Angeles, inquiring whether they had a record of a Mrs. Crippen dying there. They wrote us officially that they had not. We had previously asked Scotland Yard to take up the matter. But they did nothing until we came with the Los Angeles information. They then started anew. If they had felt as sure as we did that something was wrong, Dr. Crippen would have been in the toils long ago."

BROWNE BRIBERY TRIAL ORDERED TO PROCEED

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, indicted for bribery in connection with the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate, was ordered to proceed today by Judge Kersten. The court overruled the motion of the defense to quash the indictment because of lack of jurisdiction of the Cook county courts.

Browne was first tried a few weeks ago before Judge McSurely on the same indictment. The jury, after breaking the record for long consideration by staying out 115 hours, reported a disagreement and was dismissed.
