me in 1906. The first Gore knew of it was my testimony on Saturday.

McCurran said he opposed the McMurray Choctaw contract and in January, 1908, told McMurray that he would not accept the $25,000 offer. The next month, he said, President Roosevelt disapproved the bill which would have made it valid.

Did Not Come Through.

McCurran said he was to receive a quarter of the $750,000 F. E. McMurray of the McMurray, Mansfield & Cornish firm, was to get for certain work done for the Indians. He said the money had not been paid him and that he thought he had been treated shabbily.

It was shown by the testimony today that the McMurray firm was employed as attorneys in land sales and was also retained to resist the payment of taxes on Indian property.

Circulated Contracts.

W. B. Hallman, former Indian policeman, took the stand and testified that he had circulated the contracts and secured fully 100 signatures. He said he was paid 10 per cent for signed tax receipts, but that he got nothing for the contracts.

Hallman declared that the Choctaws wanted a general land settlement. He was cross-questioned by Congressman Miller and said that the Indians were willing to give as much as 25 per cent in order to dispose of their lands.

He said he advised that the sales be made and the contracts signed. He said McMurray told him to get men to sign for the squaws and children.

Want Their Money.

The Indians realized the money in Washington was theirs and they wanted it before they died, Hallman said.

"You were willing to hitch your wagon to McMurray, were you, and sail along?" Miller asked.

"I was willing to take a chance," the witness responded. "I told the Indians I induced to sign the contracts that McMurray would get their money for them within five years. I signed one general contract for my own family."

"You would rather have a dollar today than two tomorrow, would you?"

"If I have a dollar today maybe I can make two tomorrow," Hallman replied.

MUST GET TOGETHER.

producers until it is ready for the market.

Northwest Needs Unions.

We must in the near future have an organization in the northwest capable of handling all the apples and pears, but such a parent organization can only be built up by the union of successful smaller ones.

There must be a unit association at each important shipping station. The growers of the Rogue River valley have made a splendid beginning along the right line, but there are unfortunately a few growers who for various reasons are holding back.

As a matter of self-preservation for the future, as well as the obligation that every man owes to the general welfare, every grower or prospective grower of fruit in this valley should come in at once, take some stock in the association and lend it every assistance in his power.

Must Get Fruit.

The association absolutely must have control of all the fruit, if it is to succeed, and if it does not succeed, orchard values cannot be maintained at present figures. The marketing of pears will be an easy matter this year, but with apples it will be more difficult.

There is no disguising the fact that last year the apple market opened at too high a figure, and apple dealers lost money.

This year they are not going to bid so freely for our stuff and we must hunt the market.

If all the apples in the Rogue River valley are placed in the hands of the association they can be started in market centers and a sufficient advance obtained upon them to pay picking expenses, and they can then be sold as conditions warrant.

It is the time for all growers to bury all differences and stand by the association through thick and thin.

HARVEY W. SCOTT DEAD.

On reaching Portland Mr. Scott took up his work as editor of the Oregonian, although he was not himself physically. Possessed of an indomitable will, Mr. Scott continued at his work until about two months ago.

But will power failed to overcome his difficulties. He yielded to the entreaties of his family and submitted to medical treatment, although he had little confidence in the efficacy of drugs.

He went to Hot Lake, Or., where for two weeks he took hot baths. These baths greatly debilitated him and he was compelled to take to his bed.

Prostatectomy the Cause.

On returning to Portland from Hot Lake he summoned Dr. A. E. Mackay, who diagnosed the trouble as prostatectomy, which interferes with the necessary physical functions of the body.

After consulting General Harrison Gray Oils of Los Angeles and Ex-Senator John L. Wilson of Seattle, who had both undergone operations which relieved them of similar trouble, Mr. Scott decided to go to Baltimore and submit to an operation.

Mr. Scott, accompanied by his wife and son, Leslie M. Scott, arrived in Baltimore on August 1, and the operation was performed August 6 by Dr. Young of Johns Hopkins hospital.

He died Sunday at 6 o'clock.

Harvey W. Scott was born in Tazewell county, Illinois, February 1, 1838, and came to Oregon in a prairie schooner, reaching this state in 1852.

He entered Pacific university at Forest Grove, Or., in 1857, and graduated in 1863, having worked his way through school.
