

Newsy Notes from Rogue River Valley Towns

Central Point Items

John McNabe of Medford was in Central Point on business Monday and made this statement to your correspondent: "My, but Central Point is growing beyond all my calculations!" Mr. McNabe formerly lived here.

J. S. Murphy of Medford has purchased an interest in the Joe Boswell barber show in this city. The boys will also enter the real estate business as a side line under the firm name of Boswell & Murphy.

C. O. Metzker of San Francisco was here on a business mission Monday afternoon.

Work is being rushed on the new Parkyppie residence in the south part of town.

The new motor at the water plant works to perfection and furnishes sufficient power to pump the well dry in a ten hours' run. Everything about the plant is working to perfection and Mr. Bade, of the Jacobsen-Bade company, contractors, stated to your correspondent that he will now allow the council to receive the system in full.

John Albert has contracted with E. O. Childers for a brick business building on Pine street, between Fifth and Sixth streets.

John C. Parker of Lebanon, Mo., a large orchardist of that section of the Ozark mountains, arrived here Monday and will make a trip of inspection over the entire Rogue River valley. Mr. Parker comes to seek a health resort for his family and at the same time a place in which to continue in the fruitgrowing industry. He left Monday evening on the motor for Ashland and will return after a visit in that locality.

W. E. Kahler, who, after resting a few days and recuperating from the effects of his trip to Newport and the Willamette valley, comes forth and states that during his absence he saw a bigger country than the Rogue River valley, but not a better one.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jeffers will not leave Central Point, but it is understood will build a neat home at some other part of the city and settle down for life.

Owing to the non-arrival of material, work is lagging on the county bridge at this point.

If the county court does not attend to the unsafe place at Grimsley's slough at Agate much damage is sure to occur at that point. The road is well high impassable.

The Y. M. C. A. building fund is in the immediate vicinity of the $7000 mark, and the returns are not all in as yet. It is estimated that almost $8000 will be the result of the final windup.

The Y. M. C. A. band is now the talk among the musicians of the town and as a greater part of the Rogue River Valley cornet band belong to the association, there will be no dearth of musicians.

MULKEY OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

Insurgent Candidate for Congress Given Enthusiastic Reception at Oregon City—Exposes Hawley's Claim of Securing Appropriation

B. F. Mulkey insurgent candidate for congress opened his campaign at Oregon City Saturday evening before a large and enthusiastic audience. He said that, if elected, he would not vote for Cannon for speaker or for any man of his ideas. He pledged himself for a reduction of the tariff directly in accordance with the Republican platform. He favored clothing the interstate commerce commission with power to make physical valuations of railroads for the purpose of regulating rates. He also favored giving the commission power to put a valuation on watered stocks and bonds. He would work for and vote for amendment providing for the direct election of United States senators. He favored and gave his moral support to Statement No. 1.

Mulkey charged that Hawley had not been frank in his attitude regarding popular legislation. He pointed out that Hawley was telling how he secured the appropriation for the

BALLINGER'S CONSERVATION IS FOR RAILROAD'S INTEREST

Senator Chamberlain States That Withdrawal of Lands in Forest Reserves Would Enable Corporations to File Scrip.

Fight Against Conservation Is Not for Benefit of Homesteaders, But for Monopolistic Corporations and Giving Latter Heritage of People.

When President Taft, at the instance of Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, opens up the timber lands of Oregon to settlement the big timber interests will gobble up what they and the railroads do not already possess, and the homesteader will have, as before—nothing.

Such is the Ballinger brand of conservation, declares United States Senator George E. Chamberlain. Such is the preparation for serving the interests that the secretary of the interior has made while apparently planning for the small settler.

Laughs at Ballinger
Senator Chamberlain laughed at the statement made by Ballinger while in Portland recently that he favored the restoration of all lands to public entry that are available for agricultural or commercial purposes.

"If a homesteader finds agricultural land in the middle of the forest reserve he can settle on it lawfully," he said. "There is nothing in the withdrawal act that prevents homesteading on agricultural lands, no matter what their location. The assertion of the secretary that all lands, including the timber areas, must be restored to entry, if any are restored, is ridiculous.

Senator Chamberlain explained what he meant by saying that restoration of forest reserves in Oregon will mean their gobbling up by the timbered interests. By an act of March 3, 1891, the president was empowered to from time to time set apart as national reserves timber lands in the various states and territories. This power was caused by President Roosevelt, thus setting at naught Ballinger's assertion while in Portland that the present administration has made the only substantial progress toward true conservation. By necessity the work had to be quickly done, and many times without careful examination of the soil or the growths within the reserve. Many of the lands included in the new reservations had been granted to the railroads. In these instances the railroads were given the right to deed over their holdings to the government, receiving in return equal areas in lieu thereof without the reserves.

The Northern Pacific was one of the railroads, said Senator Chamberlain, that availed itself of this opportunity. It surrendered and deeded to the government practically worthless lands in the Mount Rainier forest reserve to receive in return thousands and thousands of acres of Oregon's best timber lands by what is called indemnity selection. The act authorized the railroad to select lands in any state where its lines extended. The Northern Pacific railroad had at the time about 30 miles of railroad in Oregon.
