river to keep the flames away from a powder house and protected it by backfiring. There were enough explosives in the powder house to have demolished the greater part of this city. The poles of the electric light company caught fire, but this was put out. If some of the poles had burned Grants Pass would have been without light, and as this city's water is pumped by electricity, there would have been a shortage of water. This morning the smoke from the burning timber settled over the city and all the houses were filled with it.
