GHOSTS PROVE TO BE RATS IN PORTLAND SALOON

PORTLAND, Or., Aug. 30.—"Ghosts" that insisted on ringing all the call bells in a saloon at West Park and Morris streets were effectually "laid" by Special Policeman Fitzsimmons early today.

For several nights the bartenders and patrons of the drinking emporium attempted to puzzle out a solution for the mysterious ringing of the bells.

Finally Fitzsimmons was called in to "lay the ghosts."

"Rats," he ejaculated, after half an hour spent in investigating.

Then he showed the proprietor two rat holes in the wall. Within could be seen the electric wires with the insulation chewed off. Every time a rodent passed through the aperture its body brought the exposed wires together, closed the electric circuit and the balls rang.

VETERANS URGED TO ATTEND REUNION

The following letter has been addressed to all of the veterans of southern Oregon by J. W. Hicks, colonel commanding, urging them to attend the reunion in Gold Hill soon:

"The 18th annual encampment of the association will be held at Gold Hill, commencing Monday, September 12, and continuing five days.

"The railroad will grant reduced rates to those attending.

"Tents, straw, wood and coffee will be furnished free to the veterans and their families.

"The camp will be located in a shady grove inside the city limits, one block from Rosene river.

"Ex-confederates are invited to meet with us and partake of our hardtack and coffee, and to our brothers of the Spanish-American war we extend the soldier's welcome.

"This is the third time we have accepted the invitation of the patriotic citizens of Gold Hill, and our remembrance of former treatment assures us of a hearty welcome and five days of enjoyment in that picturesque city.

"Comrades, as the time for our final muster out draws near the desire to once more touch elbows with those who stood in the battle front grows stronger, and we should avail ourselves of this opportunity, which to some of us will be our last rally."

"GREEN GOODS" GAME IS FRUSTRATED

PORTLAND, Or., Aug. 30.—Their gigantic scheme to swindle people of the northwest through the operation of a "green goods" game frustrated, a gang of swindlers who recently fled to Canada, where it was learned today federal agents are watching them and will arrest them should they cross the international border into the United States again.

According to federal officials, half a carload of letters were mailed recently from Salt Lake, Utah, post-office to persons in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. Each letter contained a newspaper clipping in which the government was said to have become worried over the loss of a plate for printing one-dollar bills. The intimation was given that the note was in possession of E. F. Grant, whose name was signed to the letter, and that he could supply large quantities of genuine money at a big discount.

Grant asked that all replies should be sent by telegraph to El Verano, Cal., a station on the line of the Southern Pacific, where the operator is the only inhabitant.

Federal officers received copies of the bait letters and immediately placed expert government operators at El Verano and in all Western Union offices where messages could be relayed to reach that point. The bunco men found something was wrong and escaped.

COLEMAN HOOKS BIG FISH AND SPECTATORS LAUGH

County Clerk Coleman claims the distinction of having caught a chinook salmon upon a fly, something that has been considered impossible among fishermen, but he did it on Rogue river with a bright fly. "I don't know what the fly was," said Coleman, "but I knew I had hooked something when that fish struck. It was like being tied to an express train, and Bob Dow and Charlie Prim sat on the bank, gave me various kinds of advice and laughed as if they thought it was amusing. The amusing part of it was that I landed the fish, and then I could laugh, but not before."
