RACE SUICIDE IS CHURCH SUICIDE

So Declares Father Vaughn Before Eucharistic Congress—Says Women Shake Their Little Fists in the Face of God.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—In an address today before the Eucharistic congress, Father Benard Vaughn, an Englishman, declared that the race suicide is church suicide, and severely called to task women whom he claims are forcing many of the civilized nations of the earth into a sterile paganism.

"Nothing can be more contemptible," he cried, "than those married women who shake their little fists in the face of God, saying, 'We ignore you despite your laws.'"

"From all that I can learn, the speaker continued, 'the Catholic church will soon be in control of America through its force of number. Christian fecundity is fighting sterile paganism; Protestantism is disappearing and the battle for the possession of the world soon will be narrowed down to the Catholic church.

"Racial production is unalterably connected with church progress. They react upon each other. An empty cradle means an empty church. As I said before, the Catholic church stands alone in the enforcement of God's law in this respect, and the Catholic church alone does not complain of falling attendance and membership.

"I well understand why many women don't want to be left out of public affairs entirely, and why they want to share the prizes of life. I see no fault in her ambition, but I must say I think it's a fine thing to see a woman taking in washing. She is far better off than many of her sisters who depend for their living on their ability to take in men.

"One unfortunate condition of our modern life is that so many women are compelled to look outside their homes for work. This is deplorable, but it seems to be an economic condition that cannot be remedied at once."

POSTMASTER MILLER ON FIRST VACATION

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 10.—John F. Miller, the local postmaster, is taking his first vacation in 13 years continuous service. Mr. Miller was appointed postmaster in August, 1897, and in that time has never been absent from the office for more than a day at a time. The local office has long held a high place in the efficiency records of the service, and is known as the neatest and best kept office in Oregon. Mr. Miller, who has been under the weather for some months, will return in a couple of weeks, and it is to be hoped that his vacation has renewed his health.

FIRST FACTORY HERE TORN DOWN

Old Distillery Razed—For Years It Stood as Testimonial to Early Effort to Secure Payroll for This City—No Breweries.

The big distillery building that for years has stood unused at the north end of Medford, a memento of the early efforts to secure factories and a payroll, for it was the first industrial establishment erected in the then village of 500 people, has been razed and the machinery and lumber is being hauled away and put to other uses. This distillery was erected in 1891 at a cost of about $20,000. It had a fine equipment and a capacity of 25 barrels of whisky a day. Corn and wheat, then raised in large quantities in Rogue River valley, were used in the manufacture of liquor. A large business was done for several years, but the inauguration of the fruit industry and the consequent decadence of grain-raising cut off the supply of raw material and the distillery was forced out of business, for the fruit brought fancy prices and could not be made profitably into alcohol.

Medford also had a brewery, but that, too, closed for the lack of grain. There is now no brewery or distillery in operation in all Southern Oregon. In pioneer mining days, when Jacksonville was the metropolis of all Southern Oregon and Northern California, the then bustling little city had two breweries and one large distillery. Of the distillery, which stood on Jackson creek, in the northern part of town, nothing remains, for it ceased operations in the early '80s, and the building was torn down about 25 years ago. The two breweries went out of business soon after the distillery closed and a few years afterward were dismantled and the equipment shipped away, but the buildings still stand and are used for other purposes.

REPORT HUNTERS ARE ALREADY AFTER QUAIL

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 10.—The shotgun bombardments that are heard every evening in our vicinity, especially around the hills to the north, local people cannot help but suspect that some game hog is out for his share of the quail before his more law-abiding brothers can get at them. There is lots of good quail country around Jacksonville, but when the season opens the quail are gone, probably killed or driven off by excessive shooting. It is thought that the small boy with the .22 is largely responsible for this, and next to him his slightly older brother with a $5 shotgun.
