PEOPLE BOUND TO LEGISLATE.

county election.

"I think there are several initiative bills that will fail at the election.

"The juvenile court law requires amendment, as it applies to counties other than Multnomah. The present act was drawn, having Multnomah county especially in view, and some sections were added so as to apply the act to the rest of the state. Juvenile offenders, even for small infractions of city ordinances, must now be sent before the county judge. The present law is inefficient and expensive, except as to Multnomah county.

School Legislation.

"I think there will be some legislation as to our school system. I am inclined to the view that some legislation can be passed that would be for the betterment of our public school system. The normal schools have special bills to be voted on by the people at the general election. I hope they will pass for the schools at Weston, Monmouth and Ashland. The action of the last legislature toward the normal schools was unbusinesslike and unfair, aside from the general policy of maintaining the schools.

"Our state is now in the midst of a splendid development along all lines of activity, and progressive legislation, where applicable and helpful, should be in order.

Basis of Good Legislation.

The basis of all good legislation, both state and federal, is equal protection of the law for all citizens, equal opportunity for all classes, and a check to those interests which seize public agencies. This is good progressive Republican doctrine. It will insure the square deal for all and legislation with that basis will not be objected to, except by the special interests, who do not want the square deal."

Mr. Eggleston is a graduate of West Point and served both in the line and on special duty of the staff of the army, as an engineer officer and as judge advocate. Resigning from the army in 1890, he followed mining engineering and journalism for several years.

During the past five years he has filled the office of recorder and municipal judge of Ashland, having been elected to succeed himself three times by majorities of 2 to 1. His efficient administration of his Ashland office and his familiarity with municipal matters are well known in Southern Oregon.

IDEAL REGION FOR POULTRY

Professor James Dryden, poultry husbandman, at the Oregon agricultural college, has announced that southern Oregon is an ideal district for poultry culture. The chickens in this valley are not troubled with disease so much as in wetter climes further north. It is a common sight in passing along the roads in the Willamette valley to see whole groups of chickens running around in negligent attire, much resembling in spots the monkeys who are found in the city parks of the country.

C. A. Malboeuf, secretary of the Commercial club, is very much enthused by the words of encouragement from the professor of henology at O. A. C., and is planning to publish a pamphlet containing valuable information for the local poultry raisers. He desires that every man, woman and child interested in the raising of poultry send in his name to the Commercial club so that he may receive one of these pamphlets and perhaps aid in its formation. The pamphlet will be sent to interested people elsewhere as well.

STOCK LIST SHOWS GAINS

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Gains in practically the entire list marked the opening of the stock market today. Although most of the gains were fractional, Denver & Rio Grande rose 1 1/4 and Reading more than 1 on a large buying order. New York Central and Chesapeake & Ohio also advanced 1. In the later trading, although the market remained firm, the advance was not increased. Later the market became dull and trading fell off. Slight advances prevailed, however, in the stocks traded in. Realizing sales late in the morning caused slight declines in some stocks, though the general movement was still upward. The market closed steady.

Bonds were firm.

WATT LEADS MEN'S CLUB

The Men's club held the first session for the fall and winter season in the parlors of the Presbyterian church last evening.

Officers for the ensuing semi-annual term were elected as follows: W. H. Watt, president; Walter Frazier Brown, vice-president; G. R. Harrison, secretary and treasurer; C. A. Weaver, chairman of program committee.

The club was most delightfully entertained by brief talks by Walter Frazier Brown on "My Experience With Men's Clubs"; J. H. Carlin on "The Impossibility of Living Up to the Literal Translation of the Bible"; and Rev. W. F. Shields on "What the Different Men's Clubs Are Accomplishing."

Several others made short extemporaneous talks.

The club decided to open the parlor of the church each evening as a free reading room and to furnish a janitor and a good list of periodicals.

The secretary was instructed to notify all who subscribed to the club's maintenance for 1910 that subscriptions were now due.

A committee was appointed to arrange for an "evening with Hamlet"—full particulars will be published later.

Those present, numbering some 22 men, partook of a most delicious banquet.

It was decided to hold meetings the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

FINE MANSION UPON ORCHARD

George E. Carpenter of Chicago, who, with his family and servants, has moved to Medford, has recently let a contract for a dwelling to be built on his 45-acre pear orchard in the Burrell holdings. The cost of the house alone is $12,000. It will be located on a beautiful oak covered hill at an elevation of about 100 feet above the valley. A winding macadam road is being constructed up the dwelling site, the hill top graded off to provide large grounds for tennis court, family garden and greenhouses.

The slopes will be terraced and parked, with additional trees and shrubbery. A high-pressure water system is being installed and when completed Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter will have what will undoubtedly be one of the finest and sightliest homes in the entire west. The total cash expenditure for improvements will be about $25,000.

From the Carpenter home over 12,000 acres of orchard is in easy view. Medford seems but a stone's throw distant, while Talent, Phoenix, Central Point, the Table Rocks and entire lower valley are in bold relief.

Mr. Carpenter purchased 45 acres of the Burrell orchard early last spring, paying spot cash. The land is planted to pears, which will be 7 years old this fall. He has harvested a splendid crop this season, which will net him better than 10 per cent his first year. There is no finer block of trees in the valley and they should in another year or two not only be great revenue-producers, but become one of the show places of our beautiful valley.

Mr. Carpenter has had little previous experience in orchard work, but is taking hold of his new vocation with eager hands and more than usual interest.

W. A. Bolbin left for a short business trip to Gold Hill this morning.
