"Wait," said Ennis. "Listen!" There was a flurry among the revela a few rods away. Two men had un toward the corner of the nearest parrack, looming black against the rthward sky. Others could be seen surrying after them. Then-could it ward the hospital-another nearer, another still nearer—and distant shouts and then the blare of the trumpet.

"Come on! It's fire!" said Ennis and sprang in pursuit of the leaders. "Fire!" echoed the cry from barrack to barrack as the men poured forth into the night, and then as Ennis rounded the corner and came in full view of the wide open parade with the long line of quarters beyond his heart leaped for his throat in wild dismay. "My God, Heutenant, It's your house! panted a racing trooper. "My God! And Bob's all alone!" sobbed Ennis as he sped through the snow.

All Ennis saw as he came staggering ound to the rear of the flaming furace that once was a house was a wild eyed girl being led away by a group of bending over Bob Lanier, just emerging from his third involuntary plunge in the drifts and sputtering objurgations on his would be benefactors.
