CENTRAL BANK SCHEME DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Wall Street's most desperate scheme for obtaining a threshold on the federal government, the Central bank, with the stock controlled by interests, has been balked with the passing of Aldrich from the senate, in the opinion of Charles N. Fowler, republican, of New Jersey, a possible senatorial prospect. In an exclusive interview with the United Press, Fowler, who is an anti-Cannonite and a financial expert, declared that the Central bank plan of the "interests" is dead. "The monetary commission created to deceive the people is doomed," he said. "Undoubtedly we will now have a period of thoughtful consideration of the financial currency problem. I am of the opinion that there can be but one result to this. The unfortunate character of the monetary commission, which was not selected with a view of taking advantage of the best thought of the country, but for the specific purpose of carrying out a preconceived program, will result most unfortunately and delay financial legislative action."

Fowler said that the members of the commission were unfitted, as they had no previous experience, and that night schools and junkets were essential to their primary financial education. Continuing, he said: "Through false pretense on the part of Cannon and Aldrich, the purpose of covering up the ulterior motives under claims of protecting the dignity of the senate the house law creating the commission would be so framed that appointments were confirmed to membership in congress. "Of nine members of the senate, two alone remain after March 4. In the house probably five of nine remain to recall the incidents of the last two years."

Fowler stated that his bill, providing for a commission of eleven members from the house and an equal number from the senate and 31 citizens to be named by the president, was stifled and defeated because of Cannon's and Aldrich's objections. Fowler concluded: "I think it is generally conceded now that the Central bank idea is about as dead as the monetary commission, which is now a matter of history, and a little more than an unpleasant recollection."

ANTI-ASSEMBLY FORCES WIN.

Point, Phoenix, Talent and Union. Sixteen outlying precincts are still to hear from, but probably not over 100 votes were cast in them.

Oswald West carried the county for the democratic nomination for governor by a large majority. The name of Robert G. Smith was written in for congressman, Robert Neil for state senator, Henry D. Reed for joint representative and J. W. Myers for county commissioner.

Mulkey carried the county by a vote of 640 to 356 for Hawley.

The vote on governor stood, Abraham 201, Bowerman 231, Dimmick 291 and Hofer 214.

Tom Kay got 653 votes to 277 for Hoyt. For supreme court justice, Bean got 649, McBride 498, McCamont 252, Burnett 533 and Moore 614.

For attorney-general, Crawford got 568 to Hait's 295. Clarke for state printer got 430 to Duniway's 469.

Interest in the ballot centered in the three cornered fight for state senator. Von der Heller leads with 345, Cambers is second with 330 and Colvig third with 310. Mr. Colvig claims that he will carry the missing precincts, which may change the result.

In the legislative race, Westerlund leads with 546, Eggleston is second with 502 and Mears third with 447.

In the contest for county commissioner, Davis leads Patterson by 26 votes, having 494 to 468. The result is so close that it may require the official vote to determine.

Ashland voted almost solid for Cambers and Patterson, but did not give Mulkey the expected support. Medford went strong for Mulkey and Davis, and gave both Von der Heller and Colvig a good vote. Westerlund got a big lead in Medford, which Ashland cut down. Mears ran unexpectedly well.

The polls opened at noon and closed at 7 o'clock, but less than 50 per cent of the registered voters cast their ballots.

PEACHES ARE LEAVING MARKET

Peaches and watermelons are fast passing into the "has been" class for this season. Peaches are being sold at a premium in the markets. Poor grades of peaches are being sold at five cents a pound and the grower is getting three cents from the groceryman for anything that can answer to the cognome of peach. Watermelons in another week will be almost out of the local market—leaving just one week for the small boy who has not yet satisfied his enormous affinity for juicy fruit.

ley, where the nearest telephone was located. From here the lad telephoned to Deputy Sheriff Manning at Talent, who immediately left for the place accompanied by Clifford and James Garvin. The men arrived at the place at 2 o'clock Saturday morning and began a vigil over the house, which lasted until 6:30 a. m. Then when Mock walked downstairs he was placed under arrest. There was no possibility of escape, as he had left his gun downstairs in order to avert suspicion the evening before.

Reward Is Paid.

With their prisoner the men drove back to Talent, where they secured an automobile and drove to Jacksonville, where Mock was lodged in the county jail. Sheriff Jones immediately paid the men the reward of $350, which they divided equally, giving Mrs. Trask her share. Each portion of the reward amounted to $87.50.

Trask spent the entire time he was a fugitive in the hills without seeing a single person. He is suffering from tuberculosis of the lungs. He is thoroughly tamed by his experience in trying to elude the law.

MOCK TELLS STORY.

close to them, but the darkness protected me. Morning found me in the foothills between Wagner creek and Jacksonville. I found a shady place in a canyon and took a long nap. Late in the day I woke up and first began to experience the pangs of hunger. And I had nothing to eat until Thursday morning, when I shot and killed a rabbit. But rabbits are not good without salt or a fire, and Thursday afternoon I decided that I must find a house and get something to eat. Sleeping out on the damp ground had made my lungs pain me so I began to search for a settlement. I decided at that time to return to the valley and give myself up.

Says Wife Is Good Woman.

"About 3 o'clock in the afternoon I found a house, which proved to be that of Mr. and Mrs. Trask, on what I now know to be Little Applegate. I walked boldly up to the house and told them I was a hunter that had been lost. I said I was a poor man, but if they would give me something to eat I would help Mr. Trask in building the addition to his house he is erecting. Then it was that I satisfied my terrible hunger.

"That night I purposely left my gun downstairs, as I thought it would avert any suspicion which might possibly arise. But as I have learned since, it did no good. I was not, however, greatly surprised when I heard the command to throw up my hands when I walked downstairs the next morning. In fact, I was glad that the terrible uncertainty was over. I submitted quietly and will face my trial. I have not long for this world, anyway, and perhaps it will be better to go a little sooner than I had expected. I am suffering from tuberculosis.

"The murder was not premeditated. I have a quick temper and I had been drinking that afternoon. Between the two I committed murder. But I do not feel like I have always imagined a murderer would feel. I have not been as yet confronted by the face of Smith in my dreams, though I have occasionally heard that terrible gurgle he emitted as I was leaving on the night of the crime.

Stopped at Home.

"My wife is a good woman. She has always been true to me. There was no chance for intimacy between her and Smith. I have always loved her and have tried to be good to her. Any one who says that she is a bad woman is a liar. I have lived with her for two years and I have never once questioned her actions. She has been a good wife to me and my great regret now is the fact that I have dragged her into this trouble. For myself I do not care much, but I do regret dragging her into this case. But the man who says she is not a decent woman is either a man who is wilfully lying or is listening to hearsay. She was always at home attending to the wants of her household.

Born in Missouri.

"I was born in St. Joseph, Mo., and am 43 years of age. I came to Medford a year ago last March and have since lived there. Not once did I get into trouble. I have tried to live a decent life. Before moving to Medford I lived in California, where, as in Medford, I worked at the carpenter's trade."

tric acid, Gordon's story continues, and the body, wrapped in a blanket, was also soaked with acid, that all traces of it might be lost.

Made Cement Floor.

Working at night, the doctor and his assistant, Willie Saachs, a youth who has since disappeared, made cement and laid a new floor, several inches deep upon the grave, Gordon told the detectives.

Questioned closely, Gordon told how he had endeavored to collect $18 from the doctor and when the money was refused had sworn that he would get even. This, he admitted, led him to tell his story to the police.

Gordon informed the detectives that the facts he related had been told him by Saachs, who, frightened by the knowledge of the death in which he had been forced to take a part, according to his story, felt impelled to confide in someone.

articles of the first class. The commodity rates, which include flour, lumber, potatoes, beer and cement, are so low compared with the class rates that there is not much chance of a large reduction taking place. The commodity rates on the articles just mentioned vary from 20 to 35 cents a hundred pounds from Portland to Medford.

land to Medford.

At present there is nothing certain about the reductions going into effect. The Southern Pacific company may bring the order of the commission before the court, on various grounds, but it is generally felt that the new basis will be accepted by them as reasonable, and that tariff sheets covering the changes will be announced within a short time.
