THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

Again the people of Oregon have announced their determination to rule.

Again the people of Oregon have asserted that Statement No. 1 has come to stay—part of the law of the land. Again the people of Oregon have shown that they are amply capable of selecting party nominees, without dictation from politicians.

Again the people of Oregon have expressed their disapproval of conventions and "assemblies," that assert themselves better able to choose for the people than the people themselves.

Yet so bone-headed are politicians that they cannot learn, but continue their blundering careers, and their reactionary organ, the Portland Oregonian, and its feeble echoes are already proclaiming from the ruins of their collapsed pie counter in the air, that the assembly is still an issue, that the jolt administered Saturday was not hard enough to put a quietus on the movement.

Only the most sanguine could secure crumbs of comfort for the assembly from the primary election. The assembly candidate for governor, Jay Bowerman, was nominated through divided opposition by less than a third of the vote cast. One of the assembly candidates for congress was defeated by a heavy vote, and the other pulled through only by a narrow margin. All of the assembly candidates for state office, except one, were defeated. The entire legislative ticket in Multnomah, the largest county in the state, was decisively defeated, and the vast majority of assembly legislative candidates throughout the state were snowed under. The only anti-assembly candidate for supreme court justice was nominated.

In Jackson county the entire assembly ticket met defeat. Judge Colvig polled the full strength of the assembly element, less than a third of the vote cast, and this is the full strength of the stand-pat element here.

There are none so blind as those who will not see, and we have the shattered assemblyites concentrating their strength to elect an assembly man for governor, and we have the Oregonian proclaiming that "the voters have not accepted or rejected the principle of the assembly as a rule or method of party action," despite the fact that the assembly intends to "put the knife to the hilt" in Statement No. 1 candidates.

But not only were republican assembly candidates defeated, but democratic "assembly" candidates were also beaten. Jeff Myers for governor and John Manning for congressman were both turned down hard, showing that the rank and file of both parties have no need for nor use for "guidance" by politicians.

MULKEY'S GALLANT FIGHT.

B. F. Mulkey made a gallant single-handed fight for nomination for congressman. Had he entered the fight earlier, had he had any money to spend, had he had any support from outside the district, he would have won.

Mr. Mulkey did not file in time to get his name in the official pamphlet. This handicapped him and gave his opponent an advantage. The only aggressive newspaper support he had was that of the Mail Tribune, the few aggressive papers of the district being stand-pat party organs, the rest being colorless according to custom.

Mr. Mulkey was able to visit but half the counties in the district. He could not lay his case before the voters in these counties—and so lost them.

Jackson county gave Mr. Mulkey a two to one vote. Had it not been for the caucus and a full vote been cast, he would have gone out with a 1000 majority from his home, and he deserved it, for he has fought the good fight.

But the principles of insurgency, the fight against Canonism, Aldrichism, stand-pattism, and pork barrel methods, typified by Mr. Hawley, still goes on, and will win the final battle, despite the loss of the first skirmish.

KITCHENER TO BE HEAD OF ARMY

Such a Move by Cabinet Would Prove Most Popular as Grim Old Warrior is a Favorite With the Masses.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—If the present English cabinet wishes to become popular suddenly it could not do better than appoint Lord Kitchener as head of the territorial army in Great Britain.

For that is what England is facing at the present moment—the territorial army or conscription. Created as the last hope against compulsory service, the territorialis have not come up to expectations. With a regular army admitted on all sides to be inadequate in case of a European war, every one agrees that there must be some large and efficient force in existence to guard England against invasion should the regular troops be employed in foreign service.

Insufficient training of the men, lack of capable officers, deficiency in numbers are the respects in which the territorialis fall short. The popular idea is to give Kitchener a free hand with the force. It is pointed out that apart from being the greatest soldier England at present possesses, he is a born organizer and work of the kind suggested ought to show him at his best.

And, after all, there is no reason why he should not come out on top. The failure of the territorial army has all along been due to the defects of the scheme rather than of the men. The British war office, or at least those of the officials who are not conscriptionist cranks, have been trying to turn civilians into trained soldiers, just by giving them a few hours' drill each week and a fortnight's training under canvas once a year.

Owner Farrell announced that Stallings had been deposed and that Chase had been appointed manager temporarily.

Either Chase or Arthur Irwin, the Highlander scout, probably will be appointed permanent manager.

Recently Stallings charged that Chase was "laying down" at first base and not playing his best game, hoping thereby to cause the team to lose games and secure his own appointment as manager. Stallings' charges have been under investigation.
