CHAPTER VII.

"BOB," said Mr. Ennis, sauntering in to his comrade's bedside the following morning. "I'm instructed to pay you a kiss."

Lanier's bandaged head spun on the pillow. He had but one girl in his mind.

"Wh-who?" he demanded.

Ennis threw his head back and laughed. "Nine times out of ten when a fellow is asked, 'Will you take it now or wait till you get it?' he's wise to take it now. If I'm any judge I should say you'd better wait till you get it, which may be in less than a week."

"Ennis, if you can quit being an ass long enough to tell me what you mean and where you've been I'll thank you. If you can't I wish you'd get out. You're a damned fool," concluded Bob, with a look into Apache and the pillow.

"Well, it probably isn't just the kiss you were thinking of—no more was I when I got it—but, Robert, my son and fellow soldier, it's my recorded conviction that the most enviable member of the regiment this day of our Lord is your twin trooper friend Rawdon. I saw him off on his wedding tour, and he didn't have on your clothes."

Lanier's head popped up in an instant, the one visible eye all eager interest. "Where were they married? When did they get off? Was Lowndes there?" were the questions that flew from his lips.

"Aren't you No. 6. Don't know," was the categorical answer. "Rawdon brought the person out from Omaha, and the Osborns have her away. Of Lowndes I've seen nothing since the night you staked him at Laramie, and what I've heard of him you refused to listen to. Of that cat-foot specimen of the effete and ultra refined Back Bay district you've long since had my opinion. He's too good and gentle for this western world of ours, Bob, and he and his shuddering kinfolk suffer too much by contamination."

"Oh, shut up, dad! His people did wire him that his mother was desperately ill. They merely wanted to get him away from the campaign. He'd been gambling, the pesky little fool, with some of the Rawhide crowd, was all out of cash and dared not tell his guardian. That's all there was to it. Soon's he gets his money he'll square up—thought perhaps he had, since Rawdon had enough to marry on. Lowndes owed him ten times what he owed me, I reckon."

To them, thus engrossed in confidential chat, there suddenly entered the two doctors. "Black Bill," the inspector, had given notice that he must needs have speech with the culprit, if that bandaged, blistered and unprincipled young man were in condition to see him. "Black Bill" and his host had been having a night of it. Button was in high fettle over the amazingly truthful and unlooked for articles in the Mail and as eager to know and reward their author as he had been to apprehend and punish the earlier detractor. Button had begun to "wabble," as Bill expressed it in his spleen against Lanier until so suddenly "braced" by the truculent stand of Captain Snaffle, whose half drunken words the previous night were by this time known all over the post.

The matter was now in the hands of Colonel Riggs, however, and it was his to determine what further action to take. Snaffle had named as his witness Sergeant Fitzroy, Private Kelly (who, though drunk on duty, had not been so drunk, said Snaffle and Fitzroy, that he could not recognize an officer when he saw him), and the third witness, to the amazement of Barker and the derision of Ennis when told of it, was no less a person than poor Tom Rafferty, Lanier's own "striker" and hitherto devoted henchman. And to the consternation of Stannard, Sumner and others Captain Snaffle had been able to back his words. Riggs sent for the two available, Fitzroy and Kelly, and the two had declared they could not be mistaken; that they had heard Miss Arnold's scream, followed instantly by the crash of glass. Fitzroy admitted that he was at the moment at Captain Snaffle's back door; said he ran round to the Summers' gate, that he distinctly saw the figure of a man in a soldier's overcoat and fur cap leaping and sliding down the roof and that a moment later he grappled with it in the dark woodshed, dropping his hold only when angrily ordered to do so, the voice adding instantly, "I'm Lieutenant Lanier." Fitzroy declared that a moment later Rafferty rushed to the spot, recognized the lieutenant and by him was sternly ordered to leave.

And these statements presently did Colonel Riggs lay before Lieutenant Lanier in the presence of Drs. Larabee and Schuchardt as well as Lieutenant Ennis. "I've known you three years, young sir," said he, "and I've believed in you from the first. I have reminded Sergeant Fitzroy of his previous allegations against Trooper Rawdon as to the scuffle and assault, and so far from showing confusion, Fitzroy promptly said, 'Certainly; that took place barely half a minute later and while we were at the spot.' He says his whole idea first was to drive Rawdon from the scene and prevent his finding his officer in so humiliating a plight. He says he sought in every way to shield the lieutenant, but when all these other facts came out about the cap, the clothing, the lieutenant's absence from his quarters, his lacerated hand, etc., there was no help for it. He finally yielded to the pressure of Captain Snaffle's questions and told the truth. Kelly miserably admitted his knowledge of it, and when Rafferty came to his senses he, too, was to be catechined.

ORDINANCE NO. 375.

An ordinance declaring the assessment on the property benefited for the cost of laying a six-inch water main on South Central avenue from East Thirteenth street to south boundary and directing the recorder to enter a statement thereof in the water main lien docket.

Whereas, the city council did heretofore, by resolution, declare its intention to lay a six-inch water main on South Central avenue and to assess the cost thereof on the property fronting on said portion of said street in proportion to the frontage of said property, and fix a time and place for hearing protests against the laying of said water main on said part of said street and the assessments of the cost thereof as aforesaid; and

Whereas, said resolution was duly published and posted as required by section 118 of the charter of said city; and

Whereas, a meeting of the council was held at the time and place fixed in the said resolution for the purpose of considering any such protests, but no protests were at said time, or at any other time, made or received by the council to the said laying of the said water main or the assessment of the cost as aforesaid, and said council having considered the matter, and deeming that said water main was and is of material benefit to said city, and that all property to be assessed therefor would be benefited thereby to the extent of the probable amount of the respective assessments to be levied against said property, did order said main laid; and

Whereas, the cost of the said water main has been and hereby is determined to be the sum of $422.82.

Now, therefore, it is hereby further determined that the proportionate share of the cost of laying said water main of each parcel of property fronting on said portion of said street is the amount set opposite the description of each parcel of land below, and that each place or parcel of land benefited by the laying of said main to the full extent of the amount so set opposite the description of the same, and that the respective amounts represent the proportional benefits of said water main to said respective parcels of land, and also the proportional frontage thereof on said street, and the council does hereby declare each of the parcels of property described below to be assessed, and each of the same hereby is assessed, the amount set opposite each description for the cost of laying said water main.
