MRS. ARMOR SPEAKS TO CROWDED HOUSE. The opera house was filled to overflowing last night as Mrs. Armor of Georgia arose to make her address. Mrs. Armor is a very forcible speaker, driving home her arguments and clinching them. The audience gave forth cheer after cheer and it was plain to be seen that the entire audience was with the speaker. She gave statistics in great number from different parts of the United States and showed most conclusively, from her point of view, that prohibition was the right thing. At the close of her remarks she asked all to stand that were in fa-

PAINTING A LITTLE MAN BIG.

THERE are many tricks in politics, and it takes an artist of long experience to play the game properly. A successful politician poses as the embodiment of exalted character, while within harboring cunning and craft.

Congressman W. C. Hawley has a sketch in his pamphlet telling the voters of his own wonderful achievements. It was written by Mr. Hawley himself and rushed into J. H. Ackerman's office for signature, so that the article appears as having been written and furnished by Mr. Ackerman, although he had no part in its compilation, and signed through courtesy.

Voters who read the pamphlet will notice underneath: "Facts furnished by J. H. Ackerman, superintendent of public instruction. This was to give it the appearance of having come without the person it extolled.

This laudatory sketch of Mr. Hawley, written by himself, informs us that Mr. Hawley has secured $880,000 for rivers and harbors. This $880,000 was the sum total secured for Oregon. Of this amount $565,000 was for Oregon City and Suiafaw, forced into the bill in the senate by the Oregon senators.

Mr. Hawley further states that he has secured $630,000 Indian war claims. The truth is that these were secured by the attorney general of the state, and Hawley never knew of it until months afterward. It was a court procedure, and when the decree was won, the appropriation followed.

Mr. Hawley goes on to say that he "always does large things." Perhaps this refers to his vote for the Guggenheim coal land steal, whereby the immense coal fields of Alaska could be thrown into the hands of the Morgans.

Congressman Hawley says he does "big things." Perhaps one of the big things was to promise five men the Salem postoffice, keep them all waiting two years, and then continue the incumbent in office.

Perhaps one of the "big things" Mr. Hawley says he does was his failure to furnish statistics when called upon regarding the commerce of the Willamette valley. He never could find his facts and figures, never got in touch with the committee on the subject, and it was only in the senate that the necessary data could be obtained, or support secured for the Oregon City locks.

Mr. Hawley says he does "big things." Yet since the days of the first congress no state has been so poorly represented in the lower house as Oregon the past four years. He blindly voted the program outlined for him for the trust, and followed Cannon's every beck and call.

Mr. Hawley further states that he has "great plans" for "the future." Perhaps he means that he will try to get back the little dredge so useful on Coos river, that he permitted to be taken away to Puget sound without a word of protest; or perhaps he means that he will forget in the future as he has in the past that there are any harbors in the First District.

Perhaps Mr. Hawley's "great plans" are that he will continue to plan for Portland and forget his district, even to the naming of the cadets to Annapolis and West Point, as has been the case for the past four years.

Mr. Hawley may plan big things, but he is too little to execute them. He never has done anything big, and we have no way of judging the future except by the past. He is so small that he blushing claims as his own the work done by Oregon's entire delegation, when half the time he did not know what was going on.

The Menace of Assemblyism

From the Portland Labor Press, official organ of Union Labor in Oregon.

The assembly, as an issue, is dead, but the menace of assemblyism is not. The menace of assemblyism—the ever vigilant eye and active brain of privilege to evade and defeat the will and interests of the people at large—will never die. The struggle between assembly and anti-assembly is omnipresent. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

The assembly was disapproved and defeated by popular vote. Its sponsors and devotees admit this and say that the verdict must be accepted. Soon, very soon, Mr. Bowerman will proclaim without equivocation, that he will accept that verdict, no matter what his previous attitude.

But the intelligent citizen will remember he has reference to the assembly and not assemblyism. Can the leopard change his spots or the Ethiopian his skin? Not in a day, at least. Bowerman, the candidate, is the creature of indefinite environments, certain political sentiments and business interests.

These environments, tendencies and interests are known and understood. They were created and developed in the natural but now abnormal competitive struggle—the privileged interests against the common weal.

That struggle is world-wide. It takes definite form in every political contest and is locally known by whatever name happens to be applied.

avor of Oregon dry, and the entire audience arose en masse. Mrs. Armor then said for them to shell out and for another she pleaded and the money rolled in.

Mrs. Armor has the reputation of having been the means of Georgia going dry.

to the paramount feature of its activities in the local place. In Oregon this year it was "assembly," hence it is called assemblyism.

In congress it was Cannon and Cannonism. Cannon is beaten and must go. But Cannonism—wait and see. It is fine diplomacy to admit defeat frankly. Assembly is dead, but what of assemblyism of another name?

Watch for it. Be ready to oppose it. Bowerman is very much alive. The interests he represents, the machine which nominated him, are active. Have their purposes changed?

Not at all. That node, the fixed convention, or "assembly" by which special privilege, in past years, were able to perpetuate its hold upon our institution of government is a thong of the past. Exactly as chattel slavery is a thing of the past.

But that thing which called the corporation controlled convention and slavery into existence is here still. It will be with us as long as corporations and individuals have law created special privileges.

Be ever vigilant. While the people have put an end to corporation controlled conventions, they have not yet put out of existence the thing that fixes conventions for the perpetuation of their law-made, dollar-producing privileges.

Mrs. McClyelland's Funeral. The funeral service of Mrs. Mary McClyelland was held at her late residence in Jacksonville at 2 p. m. Sunday, Rev. C. H. Johnson officiated.

The pall bearers were from the Odd Fellows lodge and consisted of: J. W. Rock, A. Watts, J. M. Rock, Louis Eaton, M. Taylor, J. M. Cronmiller.

HAROLDI PLAYS TONIGHT AT NAT

Great Polish Violinist to Appear in Concert in New Auditorium This Evening—His Triumphs Have Been World Wide Past Few Years.

It is promised that an immense audience will greet the famous Polish violinist, Haroldi, when he appears in concert tonight at the new Natatorium auditorium.

Unusual interest has been taken in the coming of this brilliant virtuoso. Music lovers who keep in touch with the outside world have read of his triumphs elsewhere and are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear him. Haroldi is now winning the unqualified praise of the American public. One reason for his success is because he is totally different from all violinists who have preceded him.

He selects for his program as his tonight's list of offerings will prove, only those compositions that brim with melody and which are humanly beautiful. It is not necessary that one be a student in order to appreciate and be carried away by his interpretations, yet none admire him more than do those who have studied music in all its intricate phases. In a word, Haroldi is an artist who possesses that happy medium which wins the love and admiration of all classes of concertgoers and which has been the means of drawing to his concerts people who, as a rule, do not attend musicales.

With Haroldi comes Cecil Cowles, the talented English pianist-composer, who is one of the finest accompanists now before the public. The program which Haroldi will give tonight is one of the most beautiful in his extensive repertoire. It follows: 1—Suite Goldmark; 2—Concerto, G minor (Vorspiel, Adagio, Finale) Bruch; 3—(a) Romance, G minor (Beethoven), (b) Minuetto (Mozart), (c) Conzonetta (D'Ambrosia), (d) Zephyr (Hubay); 4—Ballade and Polonaise (Vieuxtemps).

Last season Maude Powell, the famous woman violinist, came to Medford and it was not until she had departed that many realized what a treat they had missed by not attending her concert. Now that local music lovers are being given an opportunity to hear Haroldi, the most wonderful of all violin masters, they cannot afford to let a second chance go by. Owing to the immense capacity of the Auditorium, the management has been able to place the price of reserved seats at $1.00. In San Francisco immense audiences have been in attendance upon the Haroldi concerts, paying as high as $3.00 for their seats. In spite of the tremendous capacity of the Auditorium should be crowded tonight for those who remain away will miss the musical treat of the season.

TEACHERS TO MEET THIS WEEK

Annual Institute of Jackson and Josephine County Teachers Will Open Wednesday at Grants Pass, Oregon.

The annual teachers' institute of Jackson and Josephine counties will be held at Grants Pass, October 12, 13, and 14 in the high school building.

The staff of instructors includes such well known people as J. H. Ackerman, state superintendent; L. R. Alderman, department of education, state university; Curtis Merriman, principal of the state training school of the Cheney normal of Washington; E. D. Ressler, Oregon agricultural college, besides the pick of the educational talent of southern Oregon.

In arranging for the institute it has been the aim of J. Percy Wells and Lincoln Savage, school superintendent of the two counties, to secure the very best instructors in the field of institute work. They think they have been particularly fortunate in securing the men and women whose names appear on the program. They believe that they come prepared to give the teachers of Jackson and Josephine counties the very best that can be had in the way of institute instruction.

SMELTER IS POSSIBILITY PACIFIC COAST CENSUS IS TRUE

Los Angeles Parties Said to Have Good Ore Already Taken Out—if Smelter is Built Many Mines Will Become Active.

That there is a possibility of a commercial smelter being located at Gold Hill would seem to be indicated by a recent report which says that recently parties representing a Los Angeles company visited all the ore dumps in that vicinity with a view to ascertaining whether or not the ore would pay to smelt, says the News.

There are many thousands of tons of ore on the various dumps in the Gold Hill district that local miners claim would pay well if smelted, and according to the report the agents of the Los Angeles company found this to be the case, and made a favorable report to their company. Further than this nothing is known here of the proposition.

Southern Oregon has been a milling district, and as all of the values are not taken out of the rock by this process, as they are in a smelter, it is believed that the coming of a smelter would mean that many tons of tailings from the various mills that have been operated could be worked with profit.

Many veins that are as yet undeveloped would become profitable properties with the advent of a smelter.

TO EXHIBIT CAR AT VANCOUVER

Commercial Club Committee Will Not Have Car Exhibited in Spokane This Year—Will Seek New Laurels Across the Line.

The exhibit committee of the Medford Commercial club has decided not to exhibit a car of apples in Spokane this year, but will send a car load to Vancouver, B. C., an international show.

It is believed that inasmuch as the valley won the sweepstakes at Spokane last year that the valley would be handicapped this year. So a new show will be entered.

They have attempted to choose and arrange the subject matter in such a way as to give every teacher and every class of teachers something of practical value, something that they can take home and apply to their own work. The instructors of the last annual institute uniformly agreed that the interest and attention manifested by the teachers of Jackson and Josephine counties was far above the average and as good as they had seen at any place. It is trusted that the same spirit will prevail in this institute, for it is realized that the teachers will be benefited in proportion to other interest and attention.
