

STERILIZATION OF CRIMINALS URGED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—"With such an alarming showing as from 50 to 60 per cent of the children of our feeble minded institutions coming of deformed heredity, is it not our duty to declare in favor of the sterilization of criminals as one of the most important and effective of preventative measures?"

upon this question the American Prison association found itself divided into two bitterly opposed camps, at its meeting here. The advocates of sterilization for adults of deficient morality cited the case of the "Juke family." "Even the scant available lineage traced in the cod facts of statistics," reads the report of the pro-sterilization camp, "shows that the descendants of one woman which were 1,200 strong, caused the state of New York a loss in 75 years of more than a million and a quarter dollars in criminal prosecution and maintenance in addition to infesting society with a scourge of pauperism, imbecility and immorality."

"Because of the efficiency of sterilization as a preventative of criminality has received belated recognition, the necessity is all the more for the adoption of the practice. It is difficult to see where a moral wrong can be committed if such practice is resorted to in the case of hopelessly insane or idiotic, the feeble minded and the avowed degenerates. They are wards of the state, subjects of its care, objects of expense to it, and the propagation of their kinds should be prohibited at any cost."

The anti-sterilization camp, seizing upon a statement of their opponents, declaring that "no wife should become a mother unless she has given serious thoughts to the duties of motherhood" declared: "This would seem to favor the prevention of conception—a great and admitted evil of the time—other than by way of abstinence from sexual relationship. This statement should go back a step further and say that, 'no woman should become a wife until she has given serious thought to the duties of motherhood.'"

"When a woman marries she undertakes to become a mother which is the end of marriage. It is then too late. It is only by the awakening of the male to a sense of his responsibility and to full realization that there is such a thing as a double standard of morality of men and women that we will ever be able to grapple with the social evil."
