

ORCHARDISTS OBJECT TO CONDITION OF ROAD

CENTRAL POINT, Oct. 15.—Complaint is being made by the orchardists and others who live west of town of the condition of the railroad crossing just south of the Southern Pacific depot. Apple haulers claim that the crossing is a nuisance and a source of danger to their wagons when crossing the track with a load. It is understood that the town officials who have been appealed to step from under by saying that the crossing is upon railroad property and that it is up to the company to keep it in repair. This may be true but it doesn't make the town any more accessible to the people of all that rich orchard section between here and Jacksonville. These people want to come here with their freight and other business and we should be anxious to make it as convenient for them as possible.

If the town authorities cannot persuade the railroad company to repair the crossing better spend a few dollars on it themselves than to drive trade from the town.

"THE FIRST [POP] GUN"

The "Home Ruin Association" Rechristened "The Ananias Association."

The ex-mayor, David S. Rose meeting last Saturday evening was notable for several things.

First—It was foisted upon the laboring men of Portland, as if they had asked Mr. Rose to come to Oregon to speak for them. If the three unions represented on the platform were all the labor organizations the "Home Ruin association" could inveigle into standing sponsor for what the down and out mayor of Milwaukee had to say, the "Home Ruin people would have felt as lonesome as the editor of the Labor Press looked on the platform Saturday evening. It seems a long way from the truth to claim that meeting as under the auspices of the laboring men of Portland. It was plain to all, who were behind his coming. The hoof was apparent in the patent leather shoes of the speaker.

Labor Misrepresented.

Second—The claim was made by Ex-Mayor Rose that "all national leaders of labor have declared against prohibition." We need but quote here the utterances of those national leaders to show how false that claim is. Here it is:

The World's Greatest Prohibition Rally.

"Four thousand men packed the great auditorium in Toronto, Canada, November 14th, 1909, at Massey Hall, and some world known leaders joined in the arraignment of the liquor traffic and in aligning the labor movement with the temperance and prohibition forces.

"The time has come when the saloon and the labor movement must be divorced," declared President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor.

"We should have the protection of women and for keeping them outside the factory, so that they may become the mothers and home keepers of the nation. Will any man dare to say that the liquor business has not driven countless women to the factory, to the mill, and to the wash tub? The saloon has driven boys and girls to the factory. As one trades unionist I am unalterably against a business that has such tendencies. The time will come when trades unions will be found arrayed positively against the liquor business in every form. I give notice here and now that I will fight the saloon just as long as the saloon continues to fight the human race. No matter who puts up a scheme to rob the people through political chicanery, and graft, the avenue through which it comes is the saloon. There is no redeeming feature in the saloon. Go anywhere where its influence is felt and you see the demoralization it brings. The saloon is the enemy of the people for whom we work," declared John B. Lennon, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, at Toronto.

"The saloon is not a necessary evil. Because the liquor traffic tends to enslave the people and make them satisfied with improper conditions, and keeps them ignorant, the laborers of the trades union movement are called on to fight the saloon," declared President Tom L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, at the great Toronto rally.

"Nothing has done more to drag misery on innocent women and children than money spent in drink. I am not at all impressed with the statement often made that if you close down the liquor industry, you bring a calamity upon the community. Quite the contrary. If, through temperance, a distillery is closed, in its place will be built a store. It is simply a re-adjustment of industry," declared John Mitchell, former national president of the United Mine Workers of America, and vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Mitchell entered a strong defense against the prejudice that higher pay and shorter hours would lead to increased drunkenness. He said: "When a man comes home mentally and physically exhausted, he is more likely to seek a stimulant in the saloon. Money spent in the saloon is not surplus money. It is true," concluded Mr. Mitchell, eloquently, "that every scandal, few as they have been in organized labor, can be traced back in some connection with the saloon."

Statistics Misrepresented.

Listen to this, then write to the publishers of statistics and say, "You are wrong in your work. Ex-Mayor Rose says you are wrong." Listen: "More paupers or thousand of the population, in Maine than in all New England. More paupers in Kansas than in her neighbor state, Nebraska. More paupers in North Dakota than in South Dakota."

But that is not all. Tell the census statisticians that they are wrong also in the matter of bank deposits. Listen: "The bank deposits are less per capita in Maine than in all New England; less in Kansas than in her neighbor state Nebraska; less in North Dakota than in South Dakota." When all the time we have been led to suppose that just the opposite was true! That both in the matter of poverty and riches Maine was better off than other New England states; Kansas better off than Nebraska, and North Dakota than South Dakota! There is but one real difficulty about this whole business, as the speaker gave it Saturday night, and that is that his name is Ananias; and Ananias of old got his notoriety by falsifying in his financial report.

Poverty and the Liquor Traffic.

We wish here to insert some statistics of government authority:

- 163 paupers to each 100,000 population in Maine; prohibition.
- 256 paupers to each 100,000 population in Connecticut. License.
- 196 paupers to each 100,000 population in Rhode Island. License.

A Prophet.

One very peculiar thing about the speech of Ex-Mayor Rose last Saturday evening was the amount of prophecy he indulged in. "I am here to say," was a phrase often on his lips.

"I am here to say that Maine will turn back to licensing the liquor traffic by more than 30,000 majority, now that they have a democratic administration." And then how they did applaud, as if the ex-mayor's say so made it so.

"I am here to say that Alabama and Georgia will repudiate the prohibition heresy," then the prophesy, so pat to their wish, received great rounds of applause.

"If a search and seizure law is passed in your state of Oregon, I am here to say, you are not freedom loving citizens if you do not wholly disregard it. Should such a search and seizure law be passed in the state in which I live, I'll refuse to obey it. And if an officer of the law undertakes to enforce such a law on me, either he or I will be carried out of the house dead." That was grandly applauded, and that was anarchy of the reddest type.

Pontiac Misrepresented.

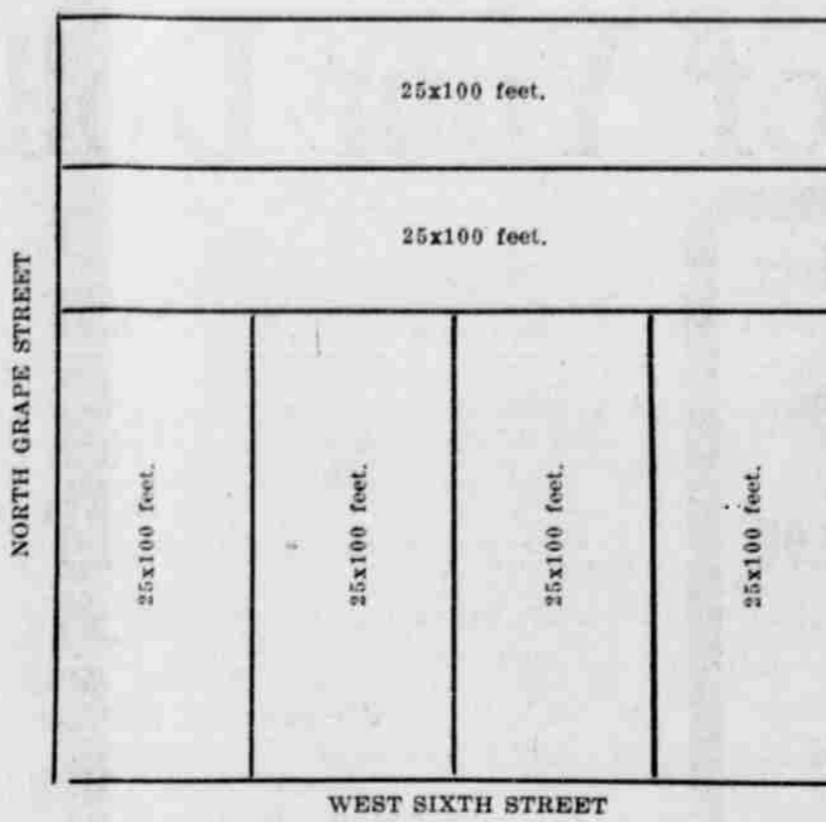

Then there was that Pontiac, Michigan yarn. That was hot stuff. Only an audience used to "Old Tom Gin" and "Old Crow Whiskey" could swallow such dope. The great majority of Brother Rose's audience, however, have been in training for that kind of thing since little boys and they did credit to their schoolmasters.

I must tell you that story about Pontiac. It seems Pontiac was dry once and voted wet again—so the ex-mayor says (?) Well, when it had been dry awhile an organization of ladies of that city—139 of them all told—began an investigation as to the results of prohibition in their home city. (The sequel as recited by Mr. Rose leads on to ask, "If the conditions were so bad, why did they have to investigate?") But they did. And they discovered (mark the words) that fathers, who were sober men before prohibition, and who brought their wages home regularly every Saturday night, after the city was voted dry became drunkards and failed to provide for their families. He went on to say, "So dry was Pontiac that the men who wanted to learn to be drunkards couldn't get the stuff in their home city to make drunkards out of them, but were forced, in order to be whiskeyites, to take the train for Detroit, and to spend their money in the whiskey saloons of that large city." Do you believe it? Oh, but Ananias says so. To us it looks like this. The 139 ladies discovered just what we have discovered in Oregon, that when we get a dry place in any of the counties, outside of Portland, the whiskey sellers of this great city have always done their level best to corrupt and debauch the people of that dry district. And in Michigan they have decided to do what we have just begun to do in Oregon, to launch a dry campaign, to shut up her great city of Detroit, as we are going to shut up our great city of Portland.—From the Steubens Flag.
