HARNED PLEASES LOCAL AUDIENCE

General Verdict Was "Excellent" But Play Itself Is Void of Artistic Merit—Neither Is It a Problem Play—Appeals to Emotions.

Miss Virginia Harned and her company gave a performance at the opera house last night that pleased the audience. In fact the general verdict was "excellent" and the opinion of the general public is usually the court of last appeal so far as the financial success of the play is concerned. But this cannot always be said of artistic success. For instance, one of Gilbert & Sullivan's best operas, "Princess Ida," died in its cradle although it was universally applauded by critics.

Miss Harned's play, "The Woman He Married," in our opinion is almost entirely void of artistic merit. Neither is it a great problem play. The author, Herbert Bashford, seems to have gathered material for his plot from the numerous emotional plays that have been seen in the last two decades. Sardau's "Lotosen" teaches no high moral, but it is art, and in the presence of high art the gross and low are never visible.

Last night's play appealed to the emotions, but not to the artistic or to the highly moral sense. In fact to analyze the plot shows it bordering somewhat on the ludicrous.

A wayward son is disinherited by a rich father for marrying a lady who had been mixed up in vaudeville, living pictures and the like, much to the disapproval of the father-in-law. The young man is engaged in writing a play, but is so harassed by creditors that he is unable to collect his thoughts and center them upon his dramatic dream. The family larder is very much depleted and the devoted wife in order to replenish the aforesaid larder arranges with a famous artist to pose as his model in what Tribby calls "The Altogether."

The husband discovers the manner in which she has been supporting the family and enters his protests, whereupon the audience is supposed to think him a brute. But it all comes out in the wash, so to speak, in what was a very pretty last act, in which the wringing of hands and the "My God, Jacks" were all out.

Ibsen has a situation somewhat similar in his "Doll's House." Nora Helmer is accused of forgery by her husband, but Ibsen's heroine in her defense rises to a dignity that makes one proud of all womankind. But Bashford and Ibsen are two different men.

The stage of our time, especially in this country, has been commercialized until it is a case of box office receipts. A play should have no part in dramatic literature that does not teach a moral, or at least be able to lay claim to artistic merit. "The play is the thing," and the public should be more severe in their criticism. The fault is not with the actor but with the Hebrew management in New York.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. It is positively guaranteed for stomach, liver or kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c at Chas. Strang's.

Can Anything be Nicer Than a First Class Steak?

Just imagine yourself real hungry and sitting down to a good meal. It makes a difference what kind of steak is set before you. If it comes from this shop you are sure to relish it. It will be first-class in every particular. We can assure this, for we have chosen the very best cattle that have been raised in this part of the west, and no better grow anywhere. We have a cold storage plant, where all meats are kept until they are tender and as nice as it is possible to have them.

To make a long story short—it would be next to impossible to get a piece of meat from our market that was not first-class in every way. We don't let it come in, in the first place, and if it should get in we don't let it go out to our customers.

Give us a trial and find out for yourself.

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.
