IN the "Interpreter's House," a department of the American Magazine written by Peter Finley Dunne, is stated a creed of politics that about expresses the belief of the average American, who has progressed mentally far enough to discard partisanship, containing as it does the essence of true democracy.

"We believe that the greatest joy and the greatest duty of men and women is productive labor. That those who live with no thought of useful production not only are burdens on men but lose their own lives.

"We believe that no man should be so burdened or driven in his work that he cannot enjoy doing it well, and that the reason why some men have too much labor is that so many men and women are idle or engaged in useless tasks.

"We believe that men and women should prize above all else the privilege of working out their individual problems of production with no other help than that of the natural co-operation of their fellows, and that this privilege should be insured to them. That is, we believe that no man and no woman should be willing or should be allowed to accept any form of privilege or subsidy. We believe that government subsidies, protection, concessions, and privileges interfere with the privilege of individual development, are unjust and corrupting in themselves, and that they are the chief present obstacle to the just, natural and stable development of this country.

"We believe that the present chief political task of the country is to uproot entirely the privilege system—no favored class and no favored man should be our aim. This means the gradual but sure wiping out of all protective taxes, the reservation of all unopened mines, forests, water powers, oil and gas deposits and other natural resources for the people, the taking back on equitable terms of all unused deposits like the unworked mines now in the hands of the United States steel trust and the unopened oil lands controlled by the Standard Oil company.

"We believe that we cannot peacefully restore to men and women the opportunity to handle and develop the natural wealth of the country without forcing apart the alliance which exists between privilege and politics. We believe this alliance is a flagrant perversion of democracy, and that undisturbed it must eventually convert democracy into an industrial oligarchy. We believe that the form of government under which we are working has in it the power to break up the combination.

We believe that all happy, useful productive living must be infused with a belief that humanity is on an upward path, and that only in the light of such a faith will flourish that spirit of humility, of gentleness, of patience, which is essential to the final realizations of the things we believe."

Chairman Norton of the democratic central committee, said: "Bell will carry Los Angeles county, and in all probability San Bernardino county. I look for a sweeping Bell victory. I believe that he will carry at least three-fourths of the Los Angeles county democratic ticket to victory with him."

JIMMY CARROLL PLEASES NEW YORK BOXING FANS

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Although Jimmy Carroll was bested by Charlie Harvey in their ten-round bout here last night, New York fans say the California bantam who was showing for the first time in the east, "will do." Carroll, who is a spidery youth, showed a kind of footwork never before seen in this section. He was in and out on top of Harvey at all times, but somehow Harvey managed to put a left in his face after enough to earn him the decision. Carroll was probably over-anxious, as many punches he launched went wide. Altogether it was one of the best bouts seen here in many months.
