ELECTION RESULTS.

THE result of the national election cannot be construed otherwise than as a protest against misgovernment against the rule of special interests.

The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was the direct cause of the uprising at the polls. The tariff taxed poverty instead of wealth. It needlessly increased the cost of living for the benefit of the trusts. It was a direct violation of Taft's campaign pledges, a repudiation of the interests of the many for the privileged few.

The democratic landslide is not due to confidence in the democratic party, but to lack of confidence in the republican party—a rebuke to its control.

Roosevelt, by his meddlesomeness, by his dictatorial bossiness, by his grandstand appeals and gallery playing, contributed in no small degree. He shattered confidence in himself by appearing as an insurgent in one part of the country and as a stand-patter in other sections, by supporting Beveridge in Indiana and by supporting Lodge in Massachusetts. In fact, the country has been suffering from too much Roosevelt.

In Oregon the election of West is a protest against assemblyism, and all that it represents. It is a triumph of the principles of "popular" government over those of "representative" government and is a final notice to politicians that the people do not intend to restore old conditions.

The election is also a tribute to the confidence and esteem in which Oswald West is held and an appreciation of his faithful public service in the past. Mr. West will make the best governor Oregon ever had. He is the most promising young man in public life in the state—the man who "makes good."

With a majority of over 1250, Jackson county is the banner West county in the state. Mr. West carried almost every precinct. He carried both Medford and Ashland by about equal majorities approximating 400 each. Jackson county also gave Smith a good majority and proved in other ways that the Rogue River valley is the most progressive section of Oregon politically, as well as in other ways.

The county commissioner fight, the hardest fought of any local contest, resulted also in a triumph for progress. Although the progressive vote was split between two candidates, they polled between them over double the vote of their opponent.

List of 25 Recovered Alive Cut to 18 When It Was Learned That
During Confusion Some Were Counted Twice—Fourteen Missing

TRINIDAD, Colo., Nov. 10.—Fifty-one bodies had been recovered from the mine of the Victor American Fuel company at Delagua, negligence at daylight today. The list of 25 recovered alive was cut to 18 when it was learned that in the confusion which reigns around the mouth of the death trap that some were counted twice.

Arrangement of the show, headed by Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific railway company, who will be in attendance throughout the week, and an exposition, the like of which the world has never seen, awaits the popular verdict. Nor will the public be disappointed. Every feature on the program will be presented; in fact, the management offers a dollar's worth of information and entertainment for every 50 cents paid at the entrance.

Thus will the efforts of several hundred growers in various parts of the northwest and a score or more of men and women working under the direction of Rev. L. Rice, secretary and manager of the national apple show, incorporated, reach its climax, presenting an educational exhibition that is not only original in his age of unique exhibitions, but also constructive in its widespread effect.

The primary purpose of the show is to encourage perfection in growing and preparing for the market the acknowledged emperor of fruit, to enlarge the orchard acreage of the country and to popularize the apple as a staple food throughout the United States and Canada and in foreign lands.

Unquestionable, the two shows in 1908 and 1909 were the means of interesting thousands of men and women in the cultivation of the apple and as a result the fruit is today the most widely and frequently discussed product of farm and orchard. President Taft, when in this city on his western tour in 1909, confirmed this when he said to his hosts on the way to Hayden Lake in northern Idaho, "Until I came to Spokane I did not know that the apple would one day become a national issue." The expositions, made by the apple have in turn brought the apple into worldwide prominence and as a consequence, the products of the northwestern orchards command the markets of Europe and Australia, as well as of America.

Realizing the enormous benefits of this undertaking, the growers and shippers in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California and the province of British Columbia and other parts of the United States and Canada and horticultural associations, boards of county commissioners, commercial clubs and transportation companies in the western country have co-operated heartily with the man
