

GAME PRESERVES OF LAVA BEDS

Forestry Service Men Are Quietly Working to Have This Big Territory Set Aside by President—Protection of Mule Tail Deer.

KLAMATH FALLS, Nov. 21.—If the plans of the forestry and biological service of the United States result satisfactorily, what is now known as the lava beds country will be set aside by the president as a retreat for the mule tail deer, according to Game Warden L. Alva Lewis.

Mr. Lewis states that for some time these two branches of the government service have been trying to get the president to take cognizance of the fact that the time is rapidly approaching when the mule tail deer will be a thing of the past in this country unless a game preserve is set aside in some suitable place for the preservation of this species of game.

Several places tributary to the great Oregon game region have been suggested as suitable for such a reserve, among these being the lava beds, in Oregon and California, and lying south of here some 30 miles. What is known as the lava beds region embraces a large territory which is fit for nothing other than the pasturing of stock. It is a rough and rugged country, with boulders scattered thickly all over it and very little timber or other resources except its range. It is an ideal place for running sheep and many hands are kept there the year around, where they live without feed except during some of the most severe winter storms.

The mule tail deer is becoming very scarce in this western country and as these lava beds have been a retreat for them, especially in winter ever since white men have known them, it is classed as an ideal place for them. Not only the mule tail but all kinds of big game haunt this region and it is the belief of the forestry and biological branches of the government service that this is really the best place in the west for a retreat for game.

COUNT TO APPEAR ON VAUDEVILLE STAGE

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 21.—Count Jacques Alexander Von Munko de Beaufort, whose domestic infelicities and fictive exploits have engaged a great part of the attention of the Chicago press for several weeks, will, if nothing interferes, make his debut as a vocalist and lecturer this afternoon at a Chicago vaudeville theater. The count will be supported by his blooded bulldog, Sanchez.

When the count was told last night that it is rumored that when he steps out to the footlights the first thing he would notice would be a shower of antiquated eggs, he said:

"Will nothing satisfy this man Kitzellen? If Kitzellen knew how distasteful it is for me to appear before the vulgar mob he would rejoice that I have this engagement. I hate it, I tell you, I hate it. It is only for the money that I do it."

The count denied that he would describe his marital troubles from the footlights.

"I intend only that I shall sing two songs in English and one in French," the count continued. "The French song is called, 'When Love Is Gone'; the English songs have not been decided upon. In addition, I shall deliver a short lecture on dogs."

Haskin's for health.
