

Brookins Races With Train;
To Fly Across Illinois.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Seated in his aeroplane, it seems to be a favorite feat of Walter Brookins to race with the fastest railroad trains. He recently made a sensational flight from Chicago to Springfield, Ill., over the route of the Illinois Central railway and is planning several other flights. When Brookins ascends he always gives the special train a minute's start, but before many miles have been "winged away" the aviator leaves the earlier invention of man far behind, as is shown in the picture. Depots, switches and crossings do not bother the man of the air, although the numerous acquisitions to the ranks of fliers make it seem certain that in a few years collisions and disputes over rights of way will make law necessary for the control of the bird men.

CATTLEMEN AND INDIANS FIGHT

Two Are Killed in Battle Over the
New Law Regarding Ranges—
Sheriff With Posse on Way to the Scene of Conflict.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 21.—In a fight between Indians from the Crow reservation and cattlemen on the reservation, two Indians were killed and two wounded, according to a report that reached here today.

A sheriff's posse is enroute to the scene of the conflict, while the district attorney is investigating charges that the Indians were fired upon from ambush.

It is charged that the cattlemen were the aggressors and arrests of well known men are expected to follow.

The fight is said to have grown out of a law barring the cattlemen from using the reservation lands as ranges.

Disregarding this law, the cattlemen, it is said, drove their stock on the Indian lands, and the Indians, rounding them up, held them for a ransom of $5 per head.

According to reports reaching here the cattlemen conferred and decided upon concerted action, firing on the Indians from ambush. Five cattlemen are said to be under surveillance awaiting the arrival of the sheriff's posse.

Miners Want Charter.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 21.—The question of granting a charter to the Western Federation of Miners will come up this week before the American Federation of Labor, which is in session here. The machinists are the principal opponents of the plan, as they declare that to admit the Western Federation would make the mining machinists subordinate to the miners. President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America is urging that the Western Federation be given a charter.

THIS ENOCH ARDEN IS NOT TURNED DOWN

When modern Enoch Ardens come home, they generally find a divorce court staring them in the face; but, while not so poetical as the creature of Tennyson's imagination, Hiram Perkins, the beloved vagabond in "Mary Jane's Pa," the play in which John Cort will present Max Figman at the Medford theater on Thanksgiving night, is found among surroundings which, while modern and pastoral, are by no means prosaic or conventional.

And Hiram Perkins is not forced to go away and leave his wife to the arms of another man. In this play by Edith Ellis he redeems himself and wins again the love of his wife. The agency used by Miss Ellis to bring about this result is the love of his little daughters, for, as Hiram says in the last act, "What greater thing in life is there than the love of little children?"

Mr. Figman's performance of "Mary Jane's Pa" is declared by all the critics to be an artistic revelation and has won him greater distinction than any of the achievements of his notable career.

ers are being buried in trenches just outside the city. An alleged order that their graves shall remain unmarked is reported to have been inspired by government officials.

Owing to a strict censorship of news, the exact number of dead is not known. All reports, however, agree that at least 100 were slain. Some sources declare that 500 fell, while other estimates vary between 200 and 300.

Many private dispatches that evidently slipped by the censor have been received by El Paso people. These messages declare that the soldiers fired volley after volley at the retreating revolutionists and that after half an hour's firing there were dead on every street of Zacatecas. Many wounded were carried from the streets and are now being cared for by friends.

Rumors of rioting at Abizee, an interior Mexican town, reached here at noon. According to the meager details, several persons were killed and the revolutionists were driven from the town.

Efforts to confirm the report of a battle at Del Rio between Americans and Mexicans up to noon today had not been successful. It was learned, however, that the Mexican government was sending troops to the border to assist the American rangers in patrolling the Rio Grande and in keeping down lawless bands of armed Mexicans who have been crossing and recrossing the river and raiding ranches.

Other Mexican troops are massing in the states where the revolution is incident. The small town of Guerrero, southwest of Chihuahua, is under martial law. Francisco Madero, the revolutionary leader, formerly had his headquarters at Guerrero. Madero is now a fugitive in the mountains surrounding the town and is being sought by Mexican cavalry. Madero is surrounded by a few of his chosen lieutenants and is expected to give battle before he surrenders.

BROOKINS MAY NEVER FLY.

"I am afraid I'm all in, boys. I don't think I have got the nerve to go up again, at least not very high."

The terror of Johnstone's death appeared to affect Brookins more than any other of the aviators at the Denver meet. Brookins had his eyes on Johnstone's machine from the minute his plane buckled, and he watched Johnstone's every movement until he was dashed to death on the ground. A friend who overheard Brookins' remark said that Brookins appeared to be terrified whenever flying was mentioned.

You believed that "dead stock" to be salable when you bought it. Probably it was—and is. Concentrate a little advertising on it—and, a week, forget that it ever worried you.

property to Americans and then pocketing the proceeds. The invasion of American cattlemen also is looked upon with little favor by Mexican cattlemen, and 3000 of this class are said to be among the forces of Francisco Madero, the revolutionary leader.

The killing of John Lockhart, an American, who was shot from ambush at Palmarita, in Durango, is another matter that likely will attract the attention of the authorities at Washington, it is believed.

Regiments of Mexican troops are now stationed at Matamoras, Nuevo Laredo, Juarez and Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, on the border. A heavy guard is patrolling Mexico City, but it is considered hardly probable that the revolutionists will attempt to capture the capital.
