NEW MANAGEMENT FOR ROYAL CAFE

Mrs. L. A. Hanson has purchased the Royal cafe and has employed E. J. Rhodes as manager. The Royal rooming house and cafe will undergo a complete overhauling from cellar to garret and from this time a first-class, respectable place will be conducted. Mrs. Hanson is well known in this section of the state, and those who know her know that she will conduct the best place possible. The rooms are now closed and will remain so for a few days, during which time they will be thoroughly overhauled and cleaned and made ready to receive only the best of roomers and lodgers. The new management wish it distinctly understood that a first-class restaurant and rooming house will be conducted, where no one may hesitate to come for a good meal at a reasonable price and where a clean room may be secured.

Cafe now open. The Royal cafe is now open for business and feeding large crowds at every meal. You are invited to come and try the Royal

Fond of Kisses? Then See 'The Kissing Girl' Tonight

"The Kissing Girl" Tonight.

"Volunteer Organist" Soon.

From Detroit's veteran music and dramatic reviewer, George Goodale, and the musical critics of Chicago comes a flood of warm praise for the new musical comedy, "The Kissing Girl," which comes to this city this evening at the Medford, where it will entertain with its gaiety those on pleasure bent—with the very latest book by Stanislaus Stange, a prolific and successful librettist. The work is said to be studded with delightful lyrics and adorned with some 20 tuneful melodies by Harry von Tilzer—an Indiana boy who sought Chicago as the exploiting point for his first comic opera. Mr. Von Tilzer openly deprecates the fact that he was born in Indianapolis instead of Posey county, where Geo. Ade, John McCutcheon and Charles Major were born and "grewed up." He believes that fame would have reached him earlier had his father moved to Posey county before he was born. The Cort theater company has been lavish in providing for the musical comedy an investiture of keeping with the magnificence of what it presents here. They have gathered a company of excellent artists.

The scenes of the operetta, three in number, are set in the Bohemian mountains of Bohemia, a locale that under the new management. Open all night. The Royal never closes, but will remain open all night and every night.

Chili and oysters will be served at

The author of the delightful sentimental play, "The Volunteer Organists", which comes to the Medford Theatre soon has created a new character which bids fair to rival the immortal Charles Dickens' "Uriah Heep" in "David Copperfield". The unique character, "Hubbard Griffin", is a sort of a hypocritical country personage who endeavors to induce God-fearing people to aid him to further his own dishonorable end. "Griffin", by being and plotting, gets the best—the Rev. Howard Sturges—into considerable trouble, but in the end receives just desserts. "Griffin" is embodiment of all that is despicable, but nevertheless the author made him human.

There are many characters in the flesh to be found in rural localities today, and those who live, or have lived in the country, will really recognize them. Apropos of this, of this, the play is always entertaining and instructive. "The Volunteer Organists" has been given an elaborate and costly stage setting and is presented by a cast of unusual merit.

affords scope for exquisite scenery and picturesque costuming. The chorus numbers 65, with a complete orchestra under the direction of Wilfrid Bennington.
