I. O. Van Wegen and Lewis Uddle have been very busy sawing with Mr. V's gasoline wood saw in Medford for the past week.

Everything is lively in Jacksonville this week. Commissioners Patterson and Owens are over for court session.

Dr. Clancy, wife and little daughter were out from Medford Sunday looking over their ranch and planning improvements to be made in the spring.

Our genial mail carrier, Mr. Broker, reports last Saturday's rain as being anything but pleasant to him. Said it rained into the cart on all sides in spite of side curtains and storm apron and that even his pockets were full of water. He also met with another mishap, one morning, which, luckily for him, did little damage. His horse became frightened at an automobile, turned so quickly that she upset the cart. Then, seeming to realize the mischief she had done, waited patiently until her driver could extricate himself and mail from under the cart and make a new start.

INSURANCE MAN MUCH PLEASED

After Visit in City Expresses Himself as Delighted With Medford and Surrounding Country—Medford is a Live One.

"What Feagan thinks of the valley" is not the title of any fairy tale, not a subject for doggerel nor a ruse for filling space, but is the real genuine opinion of W. H. Feagan, president of the Empire Life Insurance company, who made his first visit to Medford on Thursday last. So well was Mr. Feagan pleased with the country that he frankly said:

"I have traveled over practically the entire state of Oregon, been in Junction, Corvallis, Eugene, Salem, Pendleton, La Grande, Heppner, Grants Pass, Ashland, Klamath Falls and in fact nearly every town in the state of any note, and they are all good, but I am free to admit that this is the most beautiful and prosperous valley in all the state, and Medford has more real life to the square inch than any city of its population on the Pacific coast. I am an old-timer on the coast; there are but few towns from Los Angeles to the British Columbia line with which I am not thoroughly acquainted. This was not so of Medford, however, as this is my first visit here, but I know a good town when I see it. I know a good country when I see it, and while you people think your town is about as good as it can be, permit me to tell you that it is not one-half so good as it will be in five years, and in ten years you will all be wondering how it happened that you have a city here in Rogue River valley with 25,000 population. It is going to come. There is no power short of Providence to prevent it; the country is here, the resources are here, the climate is here and the enterprise is behind the people. I can say in all truth that no other city on the entire coast of 10,000 inhabitants is seeing such development as a substantial building way as is Medford, and no other valley on the coast, taking acreage into consideration, has any business of comparing itself with this fertile, beautiful and prosperous section of Oregon."

OREGON HIGHWAY TO BE DISCUSSED

Will Be One of Important Topics at the Good Roads Convention to Be Held in City of Portland Next Monday.

Aside from discussions of proposed good roads legislation, the most important subject to come before the Oregon good roads convention to be held in Portland, beginning December 12, is the building of the Oregon highway, a part of the Pacific highway.

The plan for building the Canada-Mexico highway was the only measure receiving unanimous approval at the good roads convention recently held in Walla Walla, a convention which was attended by delegates from Washington, Idaho and Montana. An Oregon man, who was not even a delegate to the convention, asked permission to endorse the project and to urge the representatives of the three states to do all in their power to further the movement.

No good roads enthusiast in Oregon has opposed the Oregon highway. All concede the value such a road would be to the state in providing a great thoroughfare for tourist travel with feeder roads leading to the places of greatest scenic interest, such as Mount Hood, the sea and Crater Lake national park. Means of procedure have consequently become of the greatest interest. Some of the promoters of the plan for the Oregon highway believe that it would work better with the statewide good roads campaign to let each county through which the road would be constructed, attend to its building, under the supervision and with the aid of state authorities and the Pacific Highway association.

AN UP-TO-DATE DRUGGIST

says it is surprising how many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old, time-tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy, nothing equaling our grandmothers' "sage tea" has ever been discovered. Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer. Nowadays when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garage for herbs and making the "sage tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. This preparation is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

Mrs. Shonts Summoned.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Theodor Shonts was ordered today to appear before the surveyor of the port to explain the presence in her baggage of $20,000 worth of jewels seized when her trunk was landed from the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

Mrs. Shonts said that failure to declare the gems was the result of ignorance of the law. She said she took $20,000 worth of gems to Europe to have them exchanged for more fashionable cut stones and that she did not think the exchange would require declaration.

HURRY HOLIDAY GIFS, IS ADVICE

Express Companies Remind Christmas Givers to Send Early in Order to Insure Prompt Delivery Before Christmas.

Forward your Christmas packages early!

This is urged upon the public by the express companies and the post-office officials. Two weeks before Christmas is none too early to mail or express packages destined for the eastern coast or even for the middle west. This advice is not given solely to make it easier for the men who handle the express and the mail, but for the satisfaction of those who send and receive gifts at holiday time and to whom the delay even of 12 hours in a package is the occasion for much disappointment.

Don't send a Christmas package to New York for instance, and order it delivered on Christmas eve. There are a lot of people who do even that. The local express office gets dozens of packages with orders to deliver to a certain point at a certain hour. Obviously it is absurd to allow only just enough time for the package to reach its destination under ordinary untroubled conditions, and expect it to be delivered promptly during the great Christmas rush. Many people have a feeling that the whole world is as anxious for grandmother or Uncle Dick to get that package as the sender is and that it will be rushed along pell-mell and hurried to its destination in order that grandmother or Uncle Dick shall not be disappointed.

It takes in the neighborhood of three weeks after Christmas to get all of the packages delivered to the point to which they are addressed, despite all that can be done. Many of the packages that are sent ahead of time come into this after-Christmas-delivery class, simply because neither postoffice officials nor express companies are able to hire enough experienced men to keep up with the extra demands. Of course you have done your part if you get the package started off two weeks in advance and if it is destined for one of the big cities in which there is much congestion and the delay occurs in the delivery from that end, it can't be helped. The main thing is for the sender to do his part by sending a long time ahead.
