TAKES PHOTO FROM MOVING AEROPLANE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 31.—It was conceded today by military and naval experts here that a startling prophesy is involved in the remarkable aerial performance yesterday of Roy Knabenshue, representative of the Wright brothers, at Dominguez aviation field, who, while flying at a height of 500 feet took a snap shot of Dominguez field. The feat is considered noteworthy because Knabenshue was traveling 40 miles an hour when he took the photograph, which, when the film was developed, showed a picture true to detail. Army experts say that Knabenshue has demonstrated that in time of war fortifications and armies in the field could be photographed from flying machines.

buried in a heavy snowslide, carried down a precipitous mountainside and finally rescued by a party for which he telephoned after climbing a telephone pole that had stopped his descent, J. C. Hutchinson, a Sunset telephone lineman, probably will be crippled for life, according to physicians at the Cle Elum hospital today.

When brought to the hospital yesterday afternoon by his rescuers, Hutchinson was suffering from a badly frozen arm and was bruised and exhausted.

The man dug his way to the surface of the snow, climbed the pole and with his pocket telephone set called Cle Elum.

The telephone company appealed to the railroad and a freight engine crew was ordered to Hutchinson's aid.

As the first test of the new Canadian anti-trust law, with whereby patents used to restrain trade may be voided, the suit against the United States Shoe Machinery company, charged with an illegal combination, is to be pressed in the courts here. The suit was brought at the instance of a number of manufacturers in Quebec, who alleged that the machinery company had combined to boost prices in restraint of trade. If the courts find the charges sustained the patent rights held by the company may be revoked and the protective duty of the articles it manufactures may be removed.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 31.—Edward McCann, former police inspector, convicted of procuring money from west side resort keepers, today lost his fight to keep out of prison, Federal Judge Carpenter, before whom habeas corpus proceedings were brought today, refused to interfere and McCann will probably be taken to Joliet tonight to begin a five-year term. It is understood influence is to be brought to bear on the state board of pardons and Governor Denison to free McCann.
