BALLINGER RESIGNS.

sociates to this valuable property, accepted by the government.

The first shot in the campaign which has finally resulted in the resignation of Ballinger was fired at the conservation congress, held at Spokane in 1910 when ex-Governor Pardee of California, in an address before that body bitterly assailed Ballinger for his alleged partiality in the Cunningham claims, and also that he was a bitter enemy to the Garfield Pinchot policies for conservation of natural resources.

This was closely followed by a report filed direct with President Taft by Special Agent Louis R. Glavis, in which he charged that the Cunningham claimants were to "grab" the Alaska coal lands and charging Ballinger with using his official position to further the acceptance of Cunningham's title to these Alaskan coal lands. Many other charges were made against Ballinger in this report, others being that he had relinquished water power sites for the purpose of allowing them to be filled up by wealthy corporations.

The president, after some days' deliberation, replied to Glavis' charges by completely exonerating Ballinger.

This report directly led up to the resignation of Pinchot and the dismissal of Glavis by Secretary Ballinger.

Thoroughly aroused Glavis and Pinchot formed a coalition and the fight for Ballinger's official scalp was on.

A demand was then made for a congressional investigation of the interior department which resulted in an official investigation of Gifford Pinchot was removed from his office by President Taft on account of his activity against the secretary. Finally the investigating committee returned a majority report once more giving Ballinger a clean bill of health. A minority report, however, declared him "unfaithful to his trust."

LOHR REPORTED TO HAVE DIED

An Unofficial Report, Received in This City Monday, Contains News of the Death in Los Angeles of Jack Lohr.

An unconfirmable report received in this city Monday brought the news that Jack Lohr, well known here, had died Saturday in Los Angeles.

Although the report is unofficial, the many friends of Lohr in this city are inclined to give it credence, owing to the fact that recent communications from him from California would indicate that his condition had improved but little since his departure from here for the south.

About a month ago, when the pulmonary trouble with which Lohr was affected, showed signs of getting the better of him, friends of his here induced him to go to Needles, Cal., in the hope that the climate here would cause a change for the better. He remained in Needles but a short time, but has since been heard from from Los Angeles. An endeavor is being made to secure confirmation of the report of his death.

NEW YORK LOOKS TO ROGUE VALLEY

This is Popular Fruit District in Manhattan—Many People to Come for Investigation and Purchase, States Local Man in Telegram.

From Mr. Burgess, one of the former proprietors of the Antelope orchard near Wellen, comes the news by wire that Medford may expect a great influx of people and capital from New York city this season. Intense interest is being shown there, and already some large parties are either on the way, or are about to start for the Rogue River valley, with Medford as the destination.

This information is in line with the statements made by many Medford residents now in the east, and points to a reasonably definite fact that 1911 will see the greatest activity in Medford that we have ever experienced. The whole east is looking to the Pacific coast, with Oregon as the promised state, and Medford the city with the first call. People are not looking for speculation this year to the extent which it has prevailed in the west for several seasons, but are coming with good common sense for homes and investment, and fruit production as followed in this district leads all other pursuits.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Colonel Roosevelt will start on his Southern and Western trip Wednesday. At Grand Canyon, Arizona, he will be joined by Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel, who will accompany the former president to the Pacific Coast.
