'HER MASTERS AGE' TOLD BY CANINE

Mary Jane Reveals to News Sleuth That City Recorder's Age is Thirty - Friends Congratulate - Great Day in and About the City Hall.

City Recorder Robert W. Telfer was the recipient of the congratulations of his many friends this morning when the fact that today is his birthday became known to his friends.

The coming of the event had been kept a close secret, not even Mary Jane, canine, 3 months old, and since her arrival in the Telfer household in its "Big Noise," having been let into the secret.

However, with true womanly intuition, she suspected something was amiss when she discovered Mrs. Telfer in the act of trying to hide something in their home. She waited her chance, dug up the "something" and found it to be a birthday present in the form of a silver case for an Elk's card, bearing the insignia of the B. P. O. E., with the words, "Robert W. Telfer," engraved above it.

Mary Jane told—and to prove the fullness of her knowledge added that Bob is 30 years old today.

ALLEGED BEATS LAND IN JAIL

Arrested in Ashland on Charge of "Jumping" Board Bill, Twain is Landed in County Jail to Await Action of the Grand Jury.

J. E. Cutbert and H. S. McKellicie, formerly employed in the culinary department of one of the local restaurants, were lodged in the county jail at Jacksonville Tuesday by Constable A. L. Irwin of Ashland, charged with an alleged violation of the state law which makes the "jumping" of a board bill a gross misdemeanor.

According to the complaint upon which the two men are held awaiting the action of the grand jury, they, after leaving this city, established their residence in a house in Ashland where provender and a nightly "be down" is exchanged for coin of the realm. Being short on "dough," and long on appetite according to the allegations, the twain became peeved when pressing demands for ante were made and took their departure. They were arrested and, in the justice court in Ashland, bound over to await the action of the grand jury.

PETITIONS COUNCIL FOR BUILDING PERMIT

ELECTRICITY AND CEMENT.

GOLD HILL promises, within a short while, to become the site of several large cement manufactories. Some of the largest deposits of limestone in the country are located in this vicinity, and we have the word of the geological experts of the federal government that the quality of lime is of the highest grade.

While the prospective manufacturers are not making cement in the newspapers, and have little to say for publication, the lime deposits have been bonded and sufficient preliminary work quietly done to satisfy capital regarding the extent and quality of the lime and the feasibility of making cement.

Though it is not generally known, electricity plays a large part in the modern cement factory. A large factory uses from 2000 H. P. upwards and it is doubtless to supply the future demand of these cement works that the Rogue River Electric company is planning a great power plant near Prospect.

No man knows the history of cement. Wander among the ruins of ancient Rome and you will find solid masonry, laid with cement made from volcanic ash mixed with lime and water. History does not tell who laid these stones and how the first mason discovered the secret of his mortar. Visit the ruined cities of the Aztecs in Central America and you will find intact their ancient masonry, laid with cement, and walls still standing made from cement and rubble.

Cement is made from a mixture of lime, silica and alumina. These things, in the right proportion, have the property of cohering until the product finally becomes as hard as stone. The lime is usually secured by burning limestone, the silica and alumina are natural products of clay.

In a modern cement plant the raw material is brought to the plant in cars and dumped into bins for the several mills, and from then on, until it is packed in bags ready for shipment, it is handled by electrically-operated machinery. The raw material from the storage bins is first dried and crushed ready for mixing. The various materials are then mixed in their proper proportions, pulverized and delivered to the burner building, where the raw material is thoroughly fused to clinker. The clinker is then delivered by electric cranes to clinker storage bins and allowed to cool, after which it is conveyed to the finishing mills, re-crushed and pulverized, and then delivered to the stock houses as finished product. Here the cement is packed into bags ready for shipment.

It is electricity which handles the material and drives the powerful crushers and grinders. This same power pulverizes the coal and blows it into the drier kilns where the cement is roasted to a clinker. Even the finished product is automatically weighed by an electric device. All the motors are dustproof and are blown out with compressed air every 24 hours. The fact that an electric motor is the only power unit which can stand a continuous 24-hour service in a dust-laden atmosphere makes it invaluable to the cement industry.

CENTRAL BANK FOR ALDRICH

Senator From Rhode Island Favors Plan He Dares Not Make Public According to English Financial Authority.

LONDON, March 7.—"A great central bank is the core of Senator Aldrich's scheme for currency reform in the United States," says the London Financial News, the foremost English authority upon all affairs of interest to the money world.

"Of course he repudiates the idea," the Financial News continues. "He repudiates the name. He calls his institution the Reserve Association. But the senator is accustomed to play in these comedies. He has undertaken more difficult parts in his time, and in particular in the great play of tariff revision. But it is quite clear that Mr. Aldrich, whose astuteness and acumen are unsurpassed by any of the republican leaders, sees a rock upon which his project may split.

"He fears public opposition to a central bank, and American public opinion may be excited against a central bank by the apprehension that its currency, like its oil, copper, railroads and foodstuffs, may become the prey of what the senator himself calls an ambitious monetary interest. He explicitly states that the scheme is crafted with this danger in view, and indeed, its intricacy is a great deal due to the multiplications of precautions against it. The politician branded as the eminently dangerous class. This clause will remain as the mark of the level to which politicians have fallen in America."

IDAHO MAY HAVE AN EXTRA SESSION

BOISE, Idaho, March 7.—While there is a prospect of an extra session of the legislature today it is generally believed that the governor will not call it.

The legislature which has just adjourned is regarded as a liberal body. Although it was expected that a statewide prohibition law would be enacted, the legislature declined to enact it or submit a resolution for prohibition by constitutional amendment, despite platform promises.

The republicans promised the creation of a railway commission law, but the measure was defeated.

JURY FREES MAN; MOB TAKES ACTION

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., March 7.—Little effort will be made, it was conceded today, to prosecute the members of the mob who last night shot and killed Wood Ayres, a prominent farmer who was let out of jail on heavy bond last fall after a jury had failed to reach a verdict on a charge of murdering his mother-in-law. Ayres was walking home last night, when he was met by 100 Warren and Allen county citizens and his body riddled with bullets. His horse escaped unharmed and its arrival home with the blood-stained saddle was the first intimation his family had of the tragedy.

ITALIAN RADICALS ARE AFTER WAR OFFICE

ROME, March 7.—Radicals in the national parliament today are demanding an investigation of the laxity of the war office, as a result of disclosures following the killing of Countess Giull di Trigona by Lieutenant Paterno.

Paterno was a cavalry lieutenant in good standing, despite the fact that he had been guilty of brawling, cheating at cards, beating women and defrauding his creditors. The minister of war says Paterno was not dismissed because the war office did not know his disreputable character.

CUDIHY TRIAL IS ON TODAY

Professor J. P. Cudihy, of the Commercial Class of the Medford High School, Being Tried on Assault Charge Before Justice Dox.

The trial of Professor Cudihy of the Medford high school, who is charged by Court Hall with having assaulted Seely Hall his son, in the corridor of the school building here last Thursday, was commenced before Justice of the Peace Henry G. Dox in Jacksonville this morning.

Up to noon, when a recess was taken for luncheon, only four of the state's witnesses had been on the witness stand and their testimony tended to show that Professor Cudihy was the aggressor in the fist fight which took place between he and young Hall. Seely Hall was the first witness called by District Attorney B. E. Mulkey, and he was followed on the witness stand by Superintendent of Schools U. S. Collins, Mrs. Canfield, a teacher in the high school, and Miss Alice Forbes, a pupil. When court reconvened after the luncheon period, the prosecution resumed their case.

Professor Cudihy is represented at the hearing by Attorney F. J. Newman. The defense's case will begin some time this afternoon, and a number of witnesses will be called in an endeavor to show provocation and that Seely Hall was the aggressor.

The fistful encounter was precipitated by an argument between the two when Professor Cudihy rebuked Hall for making a noise when entering the class room after the session had begun. Hall made a retort which angered Cudihy so that he ordered the boy from the room. Another remark followed, with the result that Cudihy followed the boy from the room into the corridor, where the fight occurred.
