passed the resolution submitting a constitutional amendment for the direct election of United States senators by a vote of 296 to 148. A similar vote is up to the senate to pass on the measure. That the resolution which was killed by the senate at this time is the first of the kind which will pass at this session of congress. Friends of the measure will urge its final consideration as soon as possible. What form the resolution will finally take it is difficult to determine. But it would not be surprising if in the form in which it is finally voted upon that it would pass it.

"There is a general movement on the part of the people to take more legislation into their own hands. These things led to the belief that there is a general movement on the part of the people to take more legislation into their own hands. I believe from the belief that the representatives of the people do not faithfully or efficiently represent them, a new opinion is forming as to how to improve the people of the future of representative government as the manner of selecting senators.
