RIVALRY INGALLS "OPPORTUNITY." (The following, written by Robert B. Malone, is favorably compared by critics with Ingalls' famous poem, "Opportunity.")

They do me wrong who say I come no more When once I knock and fail to find you in; For every day I stand outside your door, And bid you wake and rise to fight and win.

Wall not for precious chances passed away, Weep not for golden ages on the wane; Each night I hark the records of the day, At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped, To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb; My judgments seal the dead past with its dead, But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep, I lend my arm to all who say "I can," No shame-faced outset ever sank so deep, But might rise and be again a man.

Do not behold thy lost youth all aglaze? Do not reel from righteous retribution's blow? Then turn from blotted archives of the past, And find the future's pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Then rouse thee from thy spell! Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven; Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell, Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

COMMUNICATION. Eagle Point, Or., May 4, 1911. To the Editor: I notice in your Tribune of April 30, an article objecting to my way of doing business as town marshal. First, I had done nothing but put in the pound stray stock, and when there were 10 drunks in the town there were no arrests. Well, there was complaint come to me about three drunks who were at or near the residence of the writer of the article and I went after them immediately but they were one and I was informed that they were carefully put to bed in the marshal's finding them while they were in a gentlemanly drunken condition, and I would further state that the calaboose keys were turned over to me by the building committee until within the last three days. As for taking up stock I have only followed the laws of the town. Now if Mr. Ingalls would change his way of fighting everything in the shape of improvement, progression, public spirit, etc., I think he would be more appreciated, and his caustic read with more interest. As it is he can accomplish nothing I imagine he would like to see his wife back at the old way of dipping tallow candles instead of kerosene or electric lights. Whenever he comes over to Hamilton avenue and sees the modern improvements going on, the new buildings, the streets being graded, etc., it has the same effect on him as if he were waving a red flag in front of a mad bull.

Now come out of it, Mr. Ingalls, get in with the progressive element, be something and do something. You may be the head of a mouse, but you had better be the tail of a rat and going in the right direction. Because you have lived here 20 or 25 years and never kicked a rock out of the road nor cut off an overhanging limb in the road that has knocked your hat off a hundred times, is no reason you should not be subject to the streets, roads and sidewalks being made passable. Time and tide waits for no man. Therefore let us ask our mayor to set a day to clean up the town, scrape out the alleys, burn up the old rubbish and have a clean and healthier town than any in Jackson county. Perhaps four or five of these old monarch drunks and associates can quit whittling benches and goods boxes long enough to give a helping hand, and thus may the good work go on. Yours respectfully, H. G. CHILDRETH, Marshal of Eagle Point.

SNOBBERY AT ANNAPOLIS.

THAT snobbery is prevalent at the naval academy at Annapolis is proven by the insult offered to Miss Mary H. Beers, whose midshipman escort to a dance at the institution was notified by an academy official that she should not again be admitted because of her occupation as a governess.

In the scandal that followed, Captain J. M. Bowyer, superintendent of the academy, sent a letter of apology to Miss Beers, giving as a reason for the insult "misunderstanding of her status," in other words, thought she was an ordinary woman who toiled for a livelihood.

Miss Beers happened to be the daughter of the head professor of English at Yale. She is also a college graduate, and distinguished as she is by birth and education, amply qualified to teach manners to the Annapolis snobs. Because of her position, the apology was forthcoming. But would it have been for any other girl, committing the similar crime of earning her own living? Hardly.

There is no reason why those in army or navy should plume themselves upon position. They are the kept men of the nation, and have no excuse for looking down upon their providers. Fed, clothed and educated at public expense, they are not thereby justified in becoming upstarts.

Someone has labeled these cadets "millinery sprigs," and it is a fit one. Their sole claim to aristocracy is the brass buttons furnished by the indulgent people, whose toil supports them, and yet whose labor is disgrace sufficient to bar them from their functions.

What cheap imitations of European caste systems the great republic, with its army of idle rich, is furnishing!

BUSINESS DULL EAST AND MONEY PLENTIFUL.

MONEY was never more plentiful in the east than it is at present—and never scarcer in this section of the northwest.

Interest rates are making new low records—but still keep up their high rates here. The reason is that times are dull in the east—nothing doing much—little call for money, while times are lively here, the extensive development under way and the material progress of the country calling for every cent that can be secured.

Tariff revision, railroad legislation, presidential election ahead, are some of the reasons given for quiet times in the east. Whatever the cause, there is no question that while the country is prosperous, business east is remarkably dull.

What our banks and bankers must do is to secure some of this cheap eastern money for investment in this territory. No section can be fully developed upon its own capital. The northwest needs the money and is willing to pay good rates for it. It must have it to maintain its progress. It is up to our financiers to supply it.

The Commercial and Financial World of New York tells of the dull conditions and of the surplus of money and cheap interest rates as follows:

"Following the Easter holidays there has been a week of remarkable dullness, even for a dull year. On Friday things in Wall street came almost to a standstill and the market was almost motionless most of the time. Price changes throughout were unimportant, and it was evident that none of the leaders who ordinarily show passing interest in even a very dull market, was taking a hand in the proceedings.

"The congested state of the country's money markets was plainly indicated in the week's preliminary estimates of the movements in cash, which showed a gain to the New York banks of nearly $10,000,000. The influx from the interior was abnormally large for the season, and the middle west was practically responsible for the great influx of currency.

"Western country banks are piling up balances with the Chicago institutions, and these in turn are seeking New York as an outlet for the employment of some of their idle money. The highest rate publicly quoted of late has been 40 cents premium.

"The natural effect of all this is a continued tendency to new low records for money rates. This was felt on the local market on Friday, when six months' money loaned at 3 per cent on all industrials. Heretofore the three per cent has been made only on regular mixed collaterals and according to precedent money at 3 per cent on all industrials would be equal to 2 3/4 per cent on mixed. Year money loaned at 3 1/4 per cent equaling the previous low records made some time since."

Russian Symphony Soon.

Good tenors are rare. Now and then one appears who has the real tenor quality, who is artistic and who sings with an understanding of the demands of the music. Such a tenor is Frank Ormsby, who is soon to make his debut in this city as soloist with the Russian Symphony orchestra, of New York, under the leadership of that celebrated musician, Modest Alschuler.

Weak, Cold Spells.

Wilmington, N. C.—Mrs. Cora L. Ritter of this place says: "I used to have coughs and blind dizzy spells, and weak cold spells went all over me. I had different doctors, but they were unable to tell me what was wrong, so I began to take Cardui. I am now all right, in good health, and better than I have been for ten years. Cardui is a remedy for women, which has been helping sick women for nearly a lifetime. You can absolutely rely upon it. Other people have done the testing, and you should profit by their experience. Cardui has benefited a million women. Why not start taking Cardui today."

OREGON SENATOR OUTWITS HEYBURN

Chamberlain Gets Into Record Course of Attorney General Wickensham by Cleverly Slipping One Over on Standpat Senator of Idaho

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Senator Chamberlain had read into the record today an editorial from the Baltimore Sun adversely criticizing Attorney General Wickensham for his utterances at Princeton, N. J., adverse to the popular government movement. While the clerk was reading, Heyburn of Idaho entered and objected. Chamberlain suggested that inasmuch as the standpat Idahoan had not heard what the article was, he might wait and see what he believed it would do Heyburn good to hear some wholesome sentiment of that sort. When the clerk had finished the article it was allowed to go into the record.
