

DR. WHITE TO ADDRESS PUPILS

Will Lecture on Dangers of the Housefly at the High School and Illustrate His Remarks With Stereopticon Views—Subject is Timely.

In order to show the great dangers which result from allowing the common house fly to wander at will throughout a home, especially where food is exposed, Dr. Calvin B. White, state health officer, will address the high school students at the high school auditorium this afternoon, illustrating his lecture with stereopticon views. Such a lecture at this time when the fly season will shortly be with us again, is of great value.

With bridges before and behind it blown out by the rebels the train is stalled somewhere between Magdalena, Conora. A humane officer charges that the girl is insane. The pair went before the county auditor of Pierce county seeking a marriage license. The arrest followed after the girl had been brought to Seattle. The girl also is a member of the Holy Rollers which have figured in divers ways of late.

Is Outspoken

WILLIAM ALLEN CULLOP

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—Representative William A. Cullop, a democrat from Wisconsin, Ind., is one of the most outspoken men in the house. He is a short, stout man with a florid face and a prominent nose, of which he is proud. He was sitting in the restaurant of the Congress Hall hotel the other day when another man, who he did not know, sat down opposite him. In a few minutes Mr. Cullop became aware that the stranger was glaring at him as if fascinated by something. "I can tell you what you are looking at," growled Mr. Cullop. "The stranger started out of his reverie, turned pink and was about to stammer something when the Indiana member continued: "It's my nose that you are looking at. I know it is large, but the reason is that I have kept it out of other people's business and given it a chance to grow." The stranger rapidly finished his coffee and departed.

Russian Symphony Orchestra Here Tonight

BERTRAM SCHWAN, Baritone, with Russian Symphony Orchestra.

NINA DIMITRIEFF, Soprano, with Russian Symphony Orchestra tonight.

FRANK ORMSBY, Tenor, with the Russian Symphony Orchestra tonight.

Modest Altschuler, director of the Russian Symphony Orchestra which plays in this city on Wednesday evening, May 10 at the Natatorium Hall is not only the pioneer in the advancement of Russian music in America but a musician ranking with the first of all symphony orchestra conductors. There is reason for Mr. Altschuler's present place in the realm of music. When very young he was admitted as a student of music at the Imperial Conservatory of Music, Moscow, where he graduated with highest honors possible. Not only did he excel as a cellist—touring Europe with great success as a virtuoso after his graduation—but he took signal honors in the theory of music and composition. It was not an unusual thing, in the Russian Symphony Orchestra leader's student days, to have puzzling questions on composition referred to him by his associates for adjudication. And the young Altschuler always decided impartially and with accuracy. Before he left the conservatory, and afterwards, the student Altschuler was a close friend of the distinguished composers Arensky, Rachmanoff, Scriabine and highly thought of by the great Tchaikowsky. Twelve years ago Modest Altschuler left Russia for America. With his rare musical gifts he decided that the New World was the place where the broadest opportunities awaited him, and events have since proved that he was right. During the first three years of his New York residence Modest Altschuler was locked upon as a coming musical star because, in addition to exceptional musical ability, he possessed the faculty of organization. Nine years ago he brought together the Russian Symphony Orchestra, and ever since he has striven valiantly toward a musical goal that has finally been reached in the face of many obstacles that could not have been rounded by a man less resourceful and persevering. Today the Russian Symphony Orchestra classes with the best symphony orchestras in the United States. Its present efficiency and popular success is wholly due to the zeal, the capabilities of Modest Altschuler.

Modest Altschuler is a musical progressive. His programmes always contain one or more novelties and they invariably prove to be popular. In New York, where a series of concerts is given each year, the Russian Symphony Orchestra (which means Modest Altschuler) stands for musical breadth in all it undertakes. The judgment of this man in selecting Joseph Lhevoine, Alexander Scriabine, Mischa Elman and Kathleen Parlow as soloists to appear with his organization before they had appeared in America is another evidence of his ability to select great artists as well as great compositions. Modest Altschuler is a musician, who has done much, but he will do more—he is always going forward in his profession.

TALENT I. O. O. F. TO BUILD SOON

Plans for New Temple Are Adopted and Work of Erecting Will Start Soon—Will Cost in Neighborhood of $10,000.

At a meeting of the Talent lodge of Odd Fellows held last week, plans for the new temple to be erected there were accepted and work will be started at once. F. H. Fitch, of Ashland, was the successful architect in competition with several others who submitted plans. The temple is to cost $10,000. The building will be of pressed concrete blocks and is to have two stories and a basement. The basement will extend over one-half of the building. The building will occupy a space of 45 by 90 feet. The first floor will be used for a department store. On the second will be offices and the lodge room on the third. A detail description of the lodge quarters shows that nothing has been overlooked which would contribute toward the comfort of the members of the order. The lodge hall will occupy a larger part of the floor, being 30 by 52 feet in size. Adjoining the lodge room will be the preparation room, which is 20 by 30. There is also a kitchen and a banquet hall open off the main corridor. The property room, where the regalia and other effects of the order can be kept will be nine by 16 feet in size.

COUNTY ORDERS SEVEN GRADERS

Two Sprinkling Carts Are Also Included in Order—To Rush Completion of Valley Roads to Make Them Passable in Winter.

The county court has ordered seven new graders for use on the county roads as well as two new sprinkling carts. They are due to arrive in the near future and will be distributed among the various road gangs in the county. Aside from the work which has been let by contract the county will conduct an energetic roadbuilding campaign of its own during the summer. By fall it is planned to have all of the main traveled highways in the valley in such shape as to make them passable throughout the winter, something which has never obtained as yet in this county. The huge traction engine and the spreading carts which were recently purchased are more than "making good." The spreading carts each at a load haul seven cubic yards, whereas the wagon hauled but two yards at a load.

BUSY IMPROVING JACKSON HOMES

Now That Street Has Been Graded and Pavement is Being Laid Property Owners Are Making Up for Lost Time on Jackson Boulevard.

Now that the paving of Jackson boulevard is about to be completed the residents on the street are turning their attention to the beautifying of the grounds about their homes. Many had waited for many months for the street to be graded so that cement sidewalks could be put in and lots graded. Now that the streets has been graded and pavement laid, the residents are making up for lost time.

There are several crews of cement sidewalk men at work on the street in front of the various homes and in addition to this many of the property owners have men at work rounding up terraces about their homes and planting lawns. A movement is on foot to have made shade trees planted the entire length of the street of uniform size and variety so that in a few years Jackson street will be one of the most beautiful in the city.

The street is to be extended across Bear creek, the people of the city already having voted the necessary funds to erect a bridge. The street is now laid out to the top of Nob Hill crossing the entire city without an angle.

TALENT ITEMS.

The Wickstrom sawmill 6 miles west of Talent was burned early Sunday morning. It is not known how the fire started. It was first discovered about 3 o'clock in the morning by mill hands, who were sleeping in the bunkhouse nearby. The mill was being repaired and some habbiting had been done on Saturday, the day preceding, and some suggest that some hot habbit may have fallen in the dry sawdust, which smoldered in the daytime, but broke forth in flames during the night. There was some insurance on the mill. The destruction of the mill is quite a loss to Mr. Wickstrom and it also throws a number of men out of employment. On Saturday while driving home from Phoenix in a light buggy Mrs. H. H. Goddard had a collision with an automobile, resulting in the smashing of one of the wheels of the buggy. The owner of the automobile admitted that he was at fault, and Mr. Goddard states that he must settle for the loss. There are some rumors who ride in automobiles that they own the road and that all horse vehicles should give them the right of way. The Oregon law gives automobiles no more rights than others who travel. It is the opinion of some of these chauffeurs are taught a lesson. If the Oregon law cannot be enforced, who could blame the farmers for a few tires of autos were punctured with pistol shots?
