WALL STREET IN DEAL, HE SAYS, WITH MADERO

President of Mexican Liberal Party Charges That "Interests" Are Against Him and Other Leaders of His Organization.

MADERO NOT STRONG ENOUGH TO CONTROL

So Wall Street Comes to His Assistance—Says Old Conditions Will Be Resumed.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Ricardo Flores Magon, president of the Mexican liberal party, asserted in an interview given at the county jail today that big capitalistic interests in Wall street are against him and had brought about his arrest and the arrest of other leaders of the liberal party.

"The big interests of Mexico," he said, "all of which are centered in Wall street, have made a deal with Madero, and both desiring to see the liberal movement defeated, influence has been brought to bear which has resulted in our arrest."

"It is easy to see why they should want to keep us in jail. Madero, of course does not want his power threatened, and the capitalistic interests want to see the economic conditions revert once more to a status of stability, and in the same channels as things moved during the old Diaz regime.

Sees a Deal. "From my information and belief it was a deal effected between American capital and Madero that brought about the end of the revolution and the success of Madero. The fate of the revolution was really decided in a conference between Gustavo Madero and Limantour, Diaz' minister of finance, which was held at the Astor hotel in New York. Limantour was convinced by Madero that his brother had the big capitalistic interests of Mexico and Wall street behind him. Limantour then went back to Mexico and convinced Diaz of this fact, and Diaz promptly resigned.

"The American interests made a deal with Madero upon his promise of protection and upon their belief that their interests would prosper under Madero's rule. Where American capitalists made their mistake was in believing that the Mexican revolution was simply a revolution to change masters. They did not understand that it was brought about by economic conditions and that it would never stop till these conditions were satisfied.

Will Help Madero. "Now the interests are commencing to see that Madero cannot make good his promises because he cannot control the situation. The poor working classes are not content simply to change masters; they demand privileges and will not lay down their arms till these demands, particularly in regard to rights of property, are gratified.

"Therefore the representatives of the interests—the Wall street interests—have gotten together with Madero and the two have decided that influence—which only Wall street can exert—must be brought to bear on the situation through the officers of the United States government."

POINDEXTER IS FOR LA FOLLETTE

Writes to Little Giant's Headquarters That Insurgents Without Exception Will Be Glad to See Senator From Wisconsin Win.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 16.—That Senator Miles Poindexter, Washington insurgent, is an unqualified supporter of Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin for the presidential nomination in 1912 is the statement made here by W. I. Nolan, who is in charge of the LaFollette headquarters.

"There is no change in the opinion of the insurgents here regarding the presidential nomination," said a letter from Poindexter to Nolan. "I think without exception they will be delighted to see LaFollette nominated and will do everything they can to bring about that result. The statement that the movement for LaFollette was spoiled by Senator works and myself and some others refusing to sign a formal statement requesting LaFollette to be a candidate is utterly untrue."

BOY BANDIT SLIPS AWAY

Today He is Believed to Be On His Way to Sacramento—Appears at Farm House and Secures Food Officers Given Slip.

VALLEJO, Cal., June 17.—Fred Melville, boy bandit, was captured today at Benecia. He was arrested by Constable Billy Hyde. The lad, wounded in the shoulder and side, crept into Benecia quietly last night and secured a room at an obscure lodging house. He went at once to his room. Although he was evidently weary, the proprietor of the place noted little strange about his appearance. This morning the boy did not come from his room. Then the proprietor went up and found him evidently suffering great pain from the wounds. Leaving the house, he found Constable Hyde and told him he thought the young man was the boy bandit. Hyde went to the lodging house, made his way to the room and arrested the boy. He asserts that the lad admitted that he was Melville.

VALLEJO, Cal., June 16.—Fred Melville, boy bandit, surrounded by 200 men in three posses, has escaped. Today he is believed to be on his way to Sacramento. While the posses surrounded the hill on which the boy had hidden himself, and fired occasional shots to make certain that he did not escape, Melville, on his hands and knees, wormed his way along a dry creek bed and through the lines of men who were watching for him.

With his customary bravado, he appeared at the Three Mile house and told Mrs. Adolph Strubel, who was in charge of the place that he had fought the posse to a standstill and escaped. He fled from the place when she tried to call men who were sleeping in the building. By the time they were aroused he was nearly a mile away.

Give Them the Slip. The posses which had encircled the hill, at whose crest Melville was hidden, did not learn until early today that the lad had succeeded in eluding them. When word from the Three Mile house was finally sent to the host of deputies, a hasty consultation was held. An investigation soon proved that the information was correct. Then the posse men suddenly became active. Instead of camping at the base of the hill, they spread out and began a search of the neighborhood. The search was soon organized and the posse started on the supposed trail the boy had taken. At 9:30 this morning no news of the lad's whereabouts had been received and none of the searchers had learned anything definite about the trail he had taken. When he left the Three Mile house he took a road which would eventually lead him to Sacramento, and it was believed that he was endeavoring to reach the capital city. In this belief, the "Young ladies," said Archbishop Christie a few minutes later. "Governor West favors something which I oppose. I suggest that you seek the governor's wife for advice. In my opinion her ideas on woman suffrage are correct."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 16.—Charging that secret agents of the United States Steel corporation once offered him money to betray the Structural Ironworkers, and assailing the National Erectors' union, John J. McNamara now in jail in Los Angeles, charged with murder in connection with the alleged dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times, reiterates his innocence in a letter appearing in the current issue of the Bridgeman's Magazine. The letter connects the steel trust with the fight against the unions.

PUTS FAITH IN THOUGHT WAVES

Evelyn Arthur See Expects to Gain His Liberty by Influencing Jurors With Waves of Thought Which Will Filter Into Jurymen's Brains.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—Thought waves, filtering into the minds of twelve "good men and true" who will hear the case of Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the "absolute life" cult are expected to result in his acquittal, according to the belief of See, who is charged with mistreating girls in his "junior commonwealth," believes that thought waves will play a part such as portrayed in Augustus Thomas' play "The Witching Hour." He will ask permission to address the jurors himself so that the public will discuss his case and the thought waves created will favor him and thus result in his acquittal.

At the opening of court today, Attorney Cantwell, who is in charge of the defense, attacked the newspaper reporters who have been assigned to the trial. He asked permission to file information against them. He alleged that W. E. Yates, a prospective juror, whose prejudicial utterances caused the dismissal of other jurymen who heard them, did not say in the box that he would string See to a lamp post if given a chance." Cantwell charged that this statement was given to the reporters after Yates had left the jury box, and declared that such utterances, if widely published, would inflame the public mind. He demanded that the reporters be punished Judge Honore requested that Cantwell withdraw the information and he did so.

"I would rather have See nursed a serpent's breast than hazard his liberty before the public mind, inflamed by a sensational press. See's pure, ethical motives and high religious morality have been perverted by the sensational press into depraved motives to excite the public mind," said Cantwell.

The examination of veniremen was continued today. Eight jurors had been accepted before the Yates incident came up. The state's attorney intimated today that he would object to See addressing the jury. If the court sustains the objection it will be a blow to the defense, See believes.
