JOLTS AND JINGLES By Ad Brown

The woman who shot a conductor on a trolley car at Walla Walla should realize there are less noisy ways of getting out of paying a fare.

In the list of those who are to attend the national convention of Sunday school workers there is a Bishop, a Goodman, and a Heller.

Frank Link, 400 pounder, has resigned from the New York police force. There will be a missing link when the roll is called.

An Oklahoma man has willed $3500 for the care of his pet parrot. Give him the record for throwing money to the birds.

Fore and Aft Rhymes. Another question, Tell me where Things go when they're blown Here and there?

There's one I'd like to Gaze upon. 'Tis that old one, "now And anon."

And now a man wants a law passed to make all rural mail carriers blow a bugle when they deliver the mail. How much more must the suffering public stand for?

A magazine has an article on "How to recite poetry." One good way is to go down into a cistern in the middle of the night.

A Buffalo youth tried to hang himself on his best girl's front porch. Proper place for a young fellow to hang around.

Kind of mean in Jack Johnson to go to England and direct the lime-light away from the king.

Old man Umph says: "Ivry now and thin sum perfectly innocent person will have a poem written about him."

Easily Satisfied. The days of autumn Suit me best, I wear suspenders And a vest. —Billings Gazette.

'Tis only fit in Days of fall To wear those things, But is that all?

Compiling Credit Guide. The Merchants' Mercantile company of Portland, is preparing to publish a credit guide for this district, including Douglas, Josephine, Jackson and Klamath counties.

These credit guides are made up in districts covering nearly every state in the Union. They are made from the combined experience of all the merchants in each of these districts and every merchant rates his own customers according to how they have paid him.

Each merchant and professional man is furnished with a copy of the guide so that he may refer to it and look up the rating of any customer or prospective customer before giving any credit.

OUR PATRIOTIC CONGRESSMEN.

IF THE democrats in the house of representatives made good their threat to keep congress in session all summer in case the senate refuses to act on certain measures passed by the representatives, the statesmen at the capitol will be subjected to a number of discomforts.

Leaving out of account such sessions as the first of the sixty-first congress, whose 144 days of deliberation lasted until August 5, and the second of the fifty-third congress, which reached adjournment on August 28, 1894, after sitting 268 days, there are to be considered as precedents the 304-day session of the fifty-first congress, beginning on December 2, 1889, and not ending until October 1, 1890, and the first session of the fiftieth congress, opened on December 5, 1887, and lasting 321 days, or until October 20, 1888.

So, should the unbending patriotism of the democrats on the one hand, and the unflinching devotion of the republicans to the welfare of the country on the other, keep them in Washington all summer, then hardship would be only such as others have borne heretofore.

IMPROVING ARMY PRISON SERVICE.

THE most modern and advanced ideas upon penology will be introduced into the army method of handling garrison prisoners, according to orders just issued by Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff.

The purpose behind the new regulations is to give the prisoner every opportunity to make good, instead of discouraging all effort toward good behavior. Under the new orders, garrison prisoners will be allowed an abatement of five days of their terms of confinement for each period of twenty-five days of good conduct.

A garrison prisoner who has served one-half of a sentence of ten days or more, according to the new orders, may submit a request to be put on probation for the remainder of the sentence, and if his request is granted may be restored to duty on condition that if his conduct is not good while on probation he will be required to serve the remainder of his sentence.

REAL ESTATE MAN PORTLAND MAN IS "IN WRONG" DROWNS IN ROGUE

L. E. McDaniels Arrested On Complaint Sworn to by J. W. Keyes of Valley Auto Company—Hearing Tomorrow Before Justice Taylor.

L. E. McDaniels, a Grants Pass real estate dealer, has been arrested charged with larceny. F. H. Keyes of the Valley Auto company swore out the warrant, charging that McDaniels took an automobile from the garage without his permission.

It seems that McDaniels had repairs amounting to $119.85 done to his automobile and left it in Keyes and Calns' possession. The car was to be sold by them and the repair bill deducted from the amount received for the car.

Some time on June 15 McDaniels took the car from the garage and drove as far as Glendale, where he was overtaken by Keyes and Constable Singler, who brought him and the auto back to this city for a hearing, which will be given him before Justice Taylor Saturday morning.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Howard Has More Facts.

To the Editor: Permit me to add a little to the subject of a straight road to Central Point. Since my communication a day or two ago I find that a great interest in the matter has developed.

If a railroad or private corporation had the matter of such expensive improvements under advisement they would investigate every feature of the situation and would thoroughly explore every part of the country traversed to find the shortest and best route before making such permanent improvements.

There has never been any revision of the present county road since the early emigration passed through the valley before its settlement in 1846. The requirements of the emigrant travel were wood, water and grass, and these requirements were met by keeping as near Bear creek as possible.

The "old mossbacks" have been severely criticised by the late more progressive element, so now if they are willing to practice what they preach, let them get out and hustle for modern improvements and straight and good roads.

The Central Point Road. To the Editor: The most beautiful boulevards in the world in the most beautiful cities of the world, such as Washington, D. C., and Detroit, Mich., are built on curves and angles.

There is no particular beauty in a straight line, and especially so for a boulevard when it parallels a steam railroad, with its tooting locomotives and rattling cars, and the gas and smoke from the engines greeting your nostrils, and the dust and cinders pelting your eyeballs as they surely would with a boulevard paralleling the southeast side of the S. P. railroad track from Medford to Central Point.

Build the asphalt macadam road on the present county road between Medford and Central Point, and in a very short time we will see fine homes and buildings with green lawns, flowing fountains, flowers and vines, beautiful gardens and every blessed growing thing on each side of this paved highway that this marvelous Rogue River valley is capable of producing.

Compare this boulevard, with its graceful, winding curves and angles, past beautiful homes and through bowers of roses and a garden fairyland on each side, with a dreary, dusty, smoky, "straight-as-an-arrow" line boulevard along the S. P. railroad right of way, with its barren stretch of uncultivated soil and unsightly wire fences and then consider which would be the best for the county and all the people concerned.

Resolved, That the chapter extend to Mr. Woodford and family its deepest sympathy in this hour of sorrow and affliction. That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the chapter and a copy sent to the family.

There will be spiritualistic services at Smith's hall on North Grape street at 11 a. m. Sunday. In the evening services at the home of Mrs. Plymale, at 301 South Central avenue.

MRS. OLE BULL

CLEA BULL VAUGHN

ALFRED, Me., June 9.—How her granddaughter came to be Ole Bull, widow of the famous violinist, under a cherry tree in pink radiance from the spirit land was told by Miss Siri Edith Swanander of Brooklyn, N. Y., at the continuation of the contest over Mrs. Ole Bull Vaughn, the daughter, over Mrs. Bull's will.

Miss Swanander, who is of Norwegian descent, lives with her mother in Brooklyn. It was at the Swanander house that Mrs. Bull passed several of the last weeks of her life. Miss Swanander testified: "Mrs. Bull told me that the night Edwina Vaughn died, in 1902, she was with Swami Vivekananda in India and that the Swami came to her and told her that Ole Bull had made him his son when Edwina died."

Miss Swanander told how she and her mother first met Mrs. Bull at a lecture in Brooklyn in February, 1896, given under the auspices of the Brooklyn Ethical association, of which Professor William James of Harvard was the head. She said that they had met many times thereafter in New York at lectures given by Swami Vivekananda and that Mrs. Bull had sent for her to come to Green Acre, Me., Miss Sarah J. Farmer's "Advanced Thought" farm.

where it ought to be built, and no one is injured and not only the present residents and taxpayers on that road will be benefited, but the entire surrounding communities as well, and the country will be beautified and praised by everybody as it never can be with the paved road paralleling the S. P. railroad right of way instead.

Build the new asphalt, macadam on the present county road site between Medford and Central Point, and in a very short time we will see fine homes and buildings with green lawns, flowing fountains, flowers and vines, beautiful gardens and every blessed growing thing on each side of this paved highway that this marvelous Rogue River valley is capable of producing.

Compare this boulevard, with its graceful, winding curves and angles, past beautiful homes and through bowers of roses and a garden fairyland on each side, with a dreary, dusty, smoky, "straight-as-an-arrow" line boulevard along the S. P. railroad right of way, with its barren stretch of uncultivated soil and unsightly wire fences and then consider which would be the best for the county and all the people concerned.

LONDON, June 16.—As a gift to his white wife, Jack Johnson has ordered a limousine costing $18,000. The negro pugilist contracted with a jeweler for $2500 worth of interior fittings. Including in the fittings are gold vases and cases containing matches and cigarette boxes, flask and scent bottles and powder boxes. Johnson insisted on 18 karat gold, and then, to show that he did not care for expenses, ordered a duplicate set in silver for ordinary use.
