

GRIFFEN CREEK WANTS SCHOOL

Sturdy Inhabitants Are Already After New Building for Winter Time—Long Trip Is Now Necessary On Part of Children.

Although the sun is shining brightly through the trees on the mountains and into the valleys of Upper Griffen Creek the sturdy inhabitants of this region are already worrying over the school problem of the coming winter. Being Rooseveltian in their family ideals the families of this region contain many children. Last winter, the long tramp through the snow to the nearest school on lower Griffen Creek was an insurmountable obstacle to all the younger children. Accordingly many were without educational training of any sort.

Frank Stuart, a devotee of Kansas, who by some good luck chanced to locate far up the creek last winter, has struck hope into the parental bosoms by opening a campaign for a school. The feeling is strong among these mountaineers that the courage and hardihood of people who will go into the mountains and brew out homes should be rewarded by educational opportunities for their children.

WORKS SOIL WELL DOUBLING CROPS

James Wilson, Namesake of Famous Agriculturist, Proves That Intensive Farming in Rogue River Valley Pays Well.

James Wilson, a well to do farmer of Griffen creek has made the discovery that 80 acres well tended will produce more than 100 acres less intensively farmed. Settling on the creek over 20 years ago, Mr. Wilson, for years tilled 160 acres of creek bottom land. Lately Mr. Wilson sold half of his ranch. However much to his gratification he found that his crop of hay due to better fertilization of the land and more thorough rotation of crops was larger last year than it had ever been, when twice as much land had been sown. Mr. Wilson believes that he still has two much land and hopes some day to have his farm reduced to a 40-acre tract. This sized ranch he believes will bring greater results than his present farm.

VISITORS SOUND PRAISES.

Dr. Pickel, S. V. Beckwith, Col. Mundy, J. A. Perry, F. N. Cummings and Dr. C. R. Ray to take the visitors through the valley. For an hour and a half the orchard district of the valley was shown the visitors and then Medford was reached, where the party, after being given time to "clean up" after their long ride from Klamath Falls, gathered at the banquet board.

W. I. Vawter acted as toastmaster at the festivities and introduced the various speakers which included H. C. Nutt, C. S. Jackson, H. L. Pittock, John F. Carroll, J. S. Woodworth, A. D. Carlton, H. Withington, and a number of others. All told of the great surprise they met at finding Medford and the Rogue River Valley as well developed as they are.

The whole affair passed off very nicely due to the efforts of F. V. Medinsky, William Gerig and a number of others.

Those in the party who visited the city were: H. C. Nutt, fourth vice president, Northern Pacific, Tacoma; J. S. Woodworth, traffic manager, St. Paul; A. D. Charlton, assistant general passenger agent, Portland; F. H. Fogarty, assistant general freight agent, Portland; Henry Blakeley, general western freight agent, Tacoma; L. J. Bricker, immigration agent, St. Paul; O. D. Wheeler, advertising department, St. Paul; B. S. Cook, passenger department, Portland; R. B. Riggs, official photographer, Portland; W. E. Cowan, general freight and passenger agent, St. M. & S. Ry., Portland; H. L. Pittock, the Oregonian, Portland; J. W. O. Kranitz, the Oregonian; C. B. Jackson, president and general manager Oregon Journal, Portland; John F. Carroll, general manager Evening Telegraph, Portland; E. W. Costello, secretary.

All property values depend upon the prosperity of the community. If our manufacturers are prospering, and the merchant likewise, the farmer will prosper, too. The persistent demand for goods "Made in Oregon" will help bring greater prosperity to the people of Oregon.

"Hans" Wagner, the demon clouter in the National league, is the same old terror to pitchers as of yore. The bow-legged Teuton has been there a long time, but looks good for many years to come.

BRIDGE GAMES MAKE GAMBLERS

NEW YORK, June 17.—Any woman who plays bridge for money or even for prizes is wholly to blame if her child turns out to be a common gambler. This is the dictum of Judge Robert J. Wilkin of the Children's court of Brooklyn, who last year had 200 juvenile crap shooting cases alone before him. While Judge Wilkin is not the first to take this view of "society gambling" his official position and opportunity for studying the question are such that his condemnation of the polite form of sinning created more than the usual comment.

"The example set by mothers and fathers who play cards for money or prizes is increasing gambling among children," Judge Wilkin says. Years ago a man introduced a society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. There is also such a society for the protection of children. Yet there is no such society for the protection of the minds of children. I think earnestly to the minds of children, the inculcating of wrong ideas and habits that will ruin their futures, is just as bad if not a great deal worse than physical cruelty to animals and little ones.

"Every mother and father who play cards and make the game attractive to their children by telling of their gains and of the little extra luxuries they can purchase with the money, or who display some beautiful prize won at cards are certainly leaving a scar on the child's mind that will grow deeper and deeper as time goes on."

JUST WANTS A DIVORCE: NEITHER CHILD NOR COIN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 17.—Seeking neither alimony nor the custody of her daughter, Ramona, 14, Mrs. Helen M. Borden, through her attorneys, Clark and Clark, has filed suit for divorce against Gail Borden, son and heir to the New York manufacturer who made millions out of a condensed milk product. In the complaint Mrs. Borden says that she was deserted by her husband in July, 1909. Mrs. Borden is now in New York. Attorney Eugene Overton, counsel for Gail Borden, implied that the case would not be contested. "We have not yet decided," he said, "whether we will contest the case."

C. E. Anderson, general foreman for the Pacific Telephone company, in this city, has joined the ranks of the benedicts. Incidentally he stole a march on his acquaintances, who knew nothing of his plans until he and his bride stepped from the train Friday afternoon.

The marriage was performed Monday, June 5, in Fort Worth, Texas. Mrs. Anderson was formerly Miss Bee Hocker, a prominent young lady of that city. Mr. Anderson has been connected with the telephone company for several years and with the Medford station for the past four months.

The young couple took an extensive wedding tour, visiting New Orleans, Chicago and Portland. They will take up their residence in Medford.

Mrs. John S. Orth and Mrs. Alfred A. Miller have been visiting their mother, Mrs. Cordelia Ankeny at Eugene.

NO FASTING IN HIS DOCTRINE

Pastor of Bar Creek Sunday School Held Under the Trees in the Open Air Urges All Who Attend to Bring Their Lunch Baskets.

Next Sunday is a red letter day in the calendar of Griffen creekers. The lowlanders are going to join the highlanders in their basket lunch service on the divide. There will be no preaching at the Griffen creek church Sabbath as the congregation is going to join with Frank Stuart's congregation in their special service eight miles up Griffen creek from Medford on the summit of the mountains.

The Bar creek congregation has armed itself with hymnbooks and reinforced by the Griffen creek people will make the surrounding mountains ring with harmonious praises to the great Jehovah.

One thing, Dr. Stuart wants distinctly understood, which is that the service is not to be one of fast. Every good housewife is already overhauling her stock of spring chickens in search for the plumpest which will be sacrificed to hearty appetites on that day.

An urgent wholesale invitation is issued to the city folks of Medford to attend services on the divide. Bill Fields is going to bring along a few extra chickens from his famous flock of Rhode Island Reds for the prospective valley visitors.

MAY ROBSON PLEASSED.

(By Ed Andrews.)

When Herne wrote "Shore Acres," we thought the climax in the rural "down east" comedy-drama had been reached, and for Miss Robson to venture into the dramatic field with a female version of Joshua Whitecomb was, to say the least, a daring venture, and that she has succeeded is the highest tribute that one can pay to her talent as a comedienne. And when we take into account that the play itself is a very weak one, with no strength of plot, no situation of any intensity or humor, no climaxes, except those that she creates as she goes along, it is nothing short of wonderful that May Robson could send away an audience so highly pleased as the one which left the Medford opera house last evening. "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" was what a race-horse man would call a one-to-a-hundred shot—and she won!

The earnest was a good one, and, like Gilbert's "House of Lords" in his opera "Iolanthe," "Did nothing in particular, and did it very well."

It would be quite out of place to review the play from a critical standpoint. It seems to be the order of things dramatic nowadays to please the people. Mary Robson did it.

Will Register Visitors.

Special efforts will be made in the future to take care of all outsiders visiting the Commercial club rooms. A register will be kept and all visitors will be requested to sign their names that the executive force of the club will be better able to locate and advise them on any matter they may desire information. Heretofore the visitors have come and gone, leaving nothing by which they can be located and the register will prove a great help to all concerned.
